NATION WARS ON HIGH PRICES

PRESIDENT ACTS TO STOP FOOD EXTORTION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—President Wilson acted today to prevent foodstuffs from being given a rapid and unwarranted increase in price as a result of the European war. He addressed a letter to Attorney-General McReynolds asking if there is any law which could be used to prevent unwarranted increase in prices. The letter read:

My dear Mr. Attorney-General:

The rapid and unwarranted increase in the prices of foodstuffs in this country, upon the pretext of the conditions existing in Europe, is so serious and vital a matter that I take the liberty of calling your attention to it.

I would be very much obliged if you would advise me whether there is, under existing law, any action which the Department of Justice could take either by way of investigation or legal process, and what federal legislation, if any, would in your judgment be justifiable and warrantable in the circumstances.

I feel that this is a matter that we cannot let pass by without trying to serve the country. Certainly the country ought to be defended, if possible, against men who would take advantage of such circumstances to increase the price of food and the difficulties of living.

Faithfully yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

WILSON URGES FOOD PROSECUTION

President Wilson in Washington today took the lead in a nation-wide inquiry into the alarming rise in the price of foodstuffs in the United States.

Prices have risen from 5 per cent. to 100 per cent. on many foods. Everywhere the housewives of the country are demanding: "Is not this extortion? Is the war not a mere pretext of the food-robbers?"

In Boston and Massachusetts, Attorney-General Boynton and District Attorney Pelletier will investigate the rise. In New York Mayor Mitchel has inaugurated an investigation.

And in Washington the President himself sent to Attorney-General McReynolds this letter:

"My Dear Mr. Attorney-General:

WAR BULLETINS

4,000,000 FRENCH READY.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—That France has gathered her army of 4,000,000 men and is now ready for the decisive conflicts that will decide the war was the inference drawn today from an announcement that traffic on the greater part of her railways would be resumed.

DIRIGIBLE EXPLODES.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 13.—An explosion occurred on board an Austrian dirigible at Lemberg today while it was manoeuvring under the direction of German aviation experts. The German instructor and two privates were wounded.

ASK TURKEY TO EXPLAIN.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—France and her allies will demand an explanation from Turkey concerning the report that the Ottoman government has purchased the two German cruisers, Goeben and Breslau.

KAISER'S ARMY MEETS DEFEAT NEAR NAMUR; FORCED TO RETREAT

BRUSSELS, Aug. 13.—The Belgian War Office announced today that the German troops marching on Namur had been defeated "with very heavy losses" at Eghezee by Belgian troops and were now retreating.

In the conflict at Eghezee, the Belgian forces were materially aided by machine guns mounted on automobiles. These could be moved about rapidly in the plain in which Eghezee is located. After announcing the victory at Eghezee, the war office issued this statement:

"No further surprises will disturb the Belgians. Any further attacks will be victoriously repulsed by the Belgians, who have completely dispersed the belief of the invincibility of the German troops."

Eghezee lies about ten miles north of Namur and about twenty-five miles south of Hasselt, near which the battle of Haelen was fought.

WAR BULLETINS

Balkans to Fight Kaiser.

ROME, Aug. 13.—A Nish, Servia, dispatch to the Messaggero says:

"The Balkan states, despite appeals made to them by Kaiser Wilhelm, propose to reconstitute an alliance to support Russia."

Radical sympathy throughout the Balkans would naturally be drawn strongly toward Russia on account of the overwhelming number of Slavs that inhabit that region. Servia and Montenegro are already fighting on the Russian side and Wednesday's dispatches from Sofia indicated that Bulgaria would likely remain neutral.

4,000 Guns in Action.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—A news dispatch from Paris says that a great battle along the entire front began on Tuesday; that 4,000 guns are in action and that their sound can be heard along a front 180 miles long.

ARREST GERMANS IN DUBLIN.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Aug. 13.—Scores of Germans employed in Dublin hotels and in hotels at watering places on the coast were arrested today. Plans of the country around Dublin Bay were found upon one prisoner.

HEAVY CANNONADING IN CHANNEL.

DOVER, England Aug. 13.—Heavy cannonading was heard for an hour in the English Channel today.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 13.—The first engagement of the gigantic conflict that has begun on Belgian soil will be known in history as the Battle of Haelen, having centred in and about that little town of Limburg province. Here are the first details of the battle that have been received:

FORCES LINED UP FOR DECISIVE CONFLICT

THE FIRST GREAT BATTLE OF THE WAR

The German army of the Meuse, according to fragmentary reports, came in contact with the allies at a point midway between Liege and Brussels, and was repulsed. From Liege through Luxemburg and along the Franco-Prussian frontier to Switzerland fighting is in progress.

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Although a battle, greater than anything known in history, may have already opened in Belgium, continental censors were careful today to render impossible any clear view of the disposition of the 2,000,000 men engaged or moving rapidly to conflict.

The most important known phase of the fighting is still the engagement on the right flank of the first Germany army, where the Belgians and their allies are reported to have got in the rear of the Germans, turning their right wing.

Although the German right wing is said to have been beaten back, there is no official confirmation in early reports that Emperor William's forces were routed.

Following the receipt of dispatches from Brussels the official press bureau of the British government issued the following statement:

"An engagement has occurred northwest of Hasselt (Belgium) between Belgian cavalry, supported by infantry, and German forces presumed to be the second cavalry division, 2,000 strong, supported by one battalion of infantry and twelve guns.

LIEGE FORTS HOLDING OUT.

"The fourth German cavalry division is reported to be moving toward Jodoigne, but no German infantry is known to be on the left bank of the Meuse except those above mentioned.

"A battalion of Germans are entrenching near Vise.

"The Belgian forts at Liege are still holding out.

"The Germans are planting batteries of heavy guns north of Liege preparatory to a siege of the forts. Heavy artillery fire is heard there.

"The Germans are constructing a temporary railway between Vise and Hamburg, parallel to the frontier of the province of Limburg, in the Netherlands. The Germans are throwing up entrenchments all the way to Liege."

These entrenchments are evidently those being built from the Dutch frontier westward along the Meuse. Continuing, the statement says:

"Huy, Marche and Houffalize form the points on the western border frontier region held by German cavalry columns.

"German cavalry is moving eastward toward the Ourthe valley.

"The French retreat from Meulhausen in Alsace was well carried out in face of the fact that the opposing forces are in the proportion to four Germans to every Frenchman.

"The German field artillery proved far inferior to that of the French, and the shrapnel seemed only indifferently well aimed. The German artillery has not proved as effective as had been expected."

The above statement, while indicating that the fight near Hasselt was decisive, did not give the result.

GERMANS MASSING.

Hasselt lies about thirty miles northwest of Liege. Jodoigne lies thirty miles southwest of Hasselt and thirty-five miles northwest of Liege.

The Exchange Telegraph Company today announced receipt of a telegram from its Brussels correspondent saying that the right wing of the German army in Belgium was completely routed in battle with the Belgians. Nearly the whole German force was cut to pieces, the telegram said, the survivors being pursued by Belgian cavalry.

At the same time the Exchange Telegraph Company stated that the following official announcement had been issued by the Belgian War Office in Brussels:

"After passing the night in the positions they had taken up following Tuesday's skirmish the Germans were reported in numbers to be massing opposite one of our positions which they believed to be weak. The Belgian general staff was made fully aware of this movement by Belgian cavalrymen who had made a reconnaissance of the enemy's position.

"Twelve thousand men took part in a pitched battle, which is regarded as the commencement of a greater engagement which is yet to come. And our troops proved once again that they are possessed of all the attributes necessary for good soldiers. They had by far the best of matters. The main positions of the armies to all appearances remain unchanged, notwithstanding this battle. One can well believe that the success of our arms has been of great advantage to the allies in thus giving them time to make plans for a concentrated advance."

250 MILES OF FIGHTING.

It was pointed out as significant that the Belgian War Office failed to say that the Germans were routed or partly cut to pieces. The fight referred to in the Belgian War Office statement was unquestionably the conflict at Hasselt.

These announcements show that the Germans had made rapid progress through the hostile country, having reached the very heart of the interior.

National interest in the British Isles was centred upon the conflict in Belgium, where British soldiers are engaged, although hostilities are in progress for about 250 miles all the way the Eastern border of France, where the French forces are said to be holding their own.

The encounter near Hasselt shows that the advanced troops of the German army in Belgium had penetrated to a point within fifty-five miles of Antwerp, which German strategists may have for their objective.

The capture of Antwerp would give the Germans a port on the North Sea much nearer to the English Channel than any on the German coast.

The fighting at Hasselt is only a small part of the general conflict which is promised on a great battlefield taking in more than 300 square miles in central Belgium. This extends from Louvain, where the headquarters of the Belgian army are located, eastward to a point nearly touching the Dutch frontier, thence southward to a point south of Verviers, thence westward to Namur, at the juncture of the Sambre and Meuse rivers.

In the centre of this quadrangle is Liege, with its ring of forts, where the German artillery is pounding away by night and by day in an attempt to demolish the Belgian works.

AWAIT DECISIVE ACTION.

The strongest section of the great German army in Belgium and Luxemburg is the centre and left flank, which contain approximately 400,000 men, with artillery (according to the military expert of the London Times), and which is reported to be advancing slowly but steadily westward.

British military men believe that it will be three or four days and may be longer, before the terrific engagement with its boundless hosts of armed men terminates in victory for one side or the other. Most military men agree, however, that it may prove one of the bloodiest battles in the world's history.

Dispatches gathered from various sources evince the apparent falsity of earlier advices from Brussels to the effect that Belgian troops and their allies had driven all the German soldiers out of Belgian territory lying south of the Meuse.

In all probability this country lies in the direct path of the invasion of France.

There is apparently ground for belief that a big naval engagement is imminent.

Colonel Repington, the London Times military expert, says:

THROW UP BARRICADES.

"We are on the eve of a great struggle on the Meuse. Surrounded as she is by powerful enemies, a great victory is necessary for Germany at this moment. Will she strike by sea, when she striken by land? That is the only blow open to Germany which can do us mortal hurt if it succeeds.

"The chances are against success, and with every day of the war the last chance becomes less, because our land forces are daily growing in numbers and solidity. We must regard the problem through German eyes, and however much we may disbelieve in the German solution, we must be prepared for a stroke which would accord with the German soldiers' theory of war."

A telegram from Amsterdam says that Germans are throwing up barricades along the Meuse, between Maastricht and Liege, evidently to prevent the allies from getting in the German rear and cutting off communication and supplies. They have impressed a number of Belgian peasants in the work, the telegram said.

Another telegram from the same source said that the sound of heavy artillery fire could be heard from the direction of Liege or Tongres.

Americans Were Warned from Liege

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Americans in Liege were all warned to leave the country before the German bombardment began, according to consular dispatches received at the State Department today. The American consul, in a belated message filed before the Germans opened fire upon the city, stated that he "would probably have to move his office outside the range of fire," thus indicating that no neutral zone had been established by the combatants.

Captains in Crash Lose Their Licenses

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The steamboat inspection service of the Department of Commerce today officially recalled the navigation licenses of Captain G. E. Johnson, commander of the Meteor, and Captain Curtis Berry, commander of the Nantucket. The captains were charged with negligence as the result of the collision between their steamers off the Virginia capes, January 30 last, in which forty-one lives were lost.

German Reservists Arrested at Montreal

MONTREAL, Aug. 13.—Fifteen German reservists were arrested today on the liner Mount Royal. Two were later released on parole.

darkness fell. Even after sunset there was desultory artillery fire and many shells fell upon the road between Haelen and Diest, which lies four miles to the north on the River Herck.

Haelen was the centre of the conflict, with the two angles at Diest and Zeelheim.

Under the blazing August sun, throughout the entire day, the incessant artillery and rifle fire was kept up. Once the left wing of the Belgian army wavered and reinforcements were asked for.

The public firemen in Diest begged to be allowed to accompany the troops which went out to support this flank of King Albert's forces.

Soldiers on both sides fought with marked gallantry on the firing line, but according to the dispatches from the scene the Germans lost more heavily than the Belgians. By 7 a. m. the ground between Haelen, Diest and Zeelheim was cleared of Germans, but it was littered with dead and wounded, broken artillery, the carcasses of horses and cast-off arms and knapsacks.

More than 200 dead German soldiers were counted within the space of fifty yards. During the heat of the conflict three Belgian soldiers who had been wounded crawled to two nearby bridges over the Demer and blew them up.

The shells which fell in Haelen partly demolished the town and set fire to a restaurant, a church and several houses, all of which were burned.

The Germans numbered between 5,000 and 6,000, being opposed by a Belgian force made up of lancers, mounted riflemen, carabineers and artillery.

When the Germans fell back they left a big quantity of booty, which was captured by the Belgians and heaped outside the precincts of Haelen. The Belgians also captured a large number of fine cavalry horses which had been used by the Uhlans.

JAPS MAY ATTACK TSING-TAO.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—A Central News dispatch from Shanghai says: "The German Minister in Tokio reports an arrangement between the Japanese government and the British and Russian Ambassadors to the effect that Japan may assist the British and French fleets by an attack on Taing-Tao, the German naval base in the Far East. Taing-Tao is garrisoned by 5,000 German troops and reservists. All British subjects have been expelled."

BRAZIL AROUSED.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—Brazil has demanded an explanation from Germany, according to announcement made here today, of an attack alleged to have been made on Bernardino De Campos, former president of the State of Sao Paulo.

DECLARES GERMAN FLEET WILL FIGHT

ENGLISH INVASION HINGES ON RESULT

By COLONEL REPINGTON.

Military expert for the American and the London Times.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—On Wednesday many good judges were inclined to doubt the offer of battle by the Germans at sea. The disparity of forces, the security of German coasts, the political utility of a strong and unbeaten navy are all influences which may impose upon German sailors an attitude which we may be sure is most galling to them.

BUT A PASSIVE SPECTATOR.

On the other hand, what is the use of a navy which in war remains in the harbor; does not prevent overseas expeditions by its enemy; listens dejectedly to a tale of loss of German's colonies and remains a passive spectator of hopeless ruin of Germany's magnificent maritime trade?

Is all this boasting of what the young navy was going to do in warmere bluster? Can the navy accept such an ignominious rule and survive? I cannot believe it.

It would have been easy for Germany in the interval which has elapsed since the declaration of war to have prepared ample transports for the service of a great expedition. The presence of large bodies of troops in North Schleswig is reported from Denmark. We assume that troops have been assembled and will be embarked ready to take advantage of any success at sea.

This is the only blow open to Germany which can do us mortal hurt. The chances are against its success, and with every day the chances become less because our land forces are daily growing in numbers and solidity.

PREDICTS BATTLE TODAY.

German cavalry at many points forednadow an advance and by Friday the French forces should be in position and ready for a trial in the first real battle.

Assuming that the main French forces are on the line of the Meuse from Verdun to Namur, it is evident that the German masses are confronted with the one thing the German strategist likes least; namely, a parallel battle.

A parallel battle with approximately equal forces usually has indecisive results. Germany at this moment is deadly in need of a decisive battle. Every officer shows that the offensive has in principle great advantages and alone offers decisive results, but in a parallel battis between practically equal forces many, if not most, of the advantages of the offensive disappear and it seems best in this case to let the Germans come to us.

BROKEN THEIR HEADS.

When they have broken their heads against prepared positions, then forward, and let the offensive be all that our hearts desire. This was the theory which Moltke once preached to his disciples. It seems very applicable now. We are in a hurry. We have no Russian steamroller blundering upon our rear.

A successful offensive is very difficult to direct and control. If the attackers are disconcerted and the advance troops thrown back with the loss of men and guns, a bad moral effect is produced.

What we have to do is to reorganize the German failures at Liege and induce the enemy to attack us. When we have taken the fine edge of the attack then comes the hour for offensive against the already half-beaten troops.

KIPLING'S POEM OF 20 YEARS AGO FORETOLD PRESENT SITUATION

Twenty years ago Rudyard Kipling forecasted the present situation on the Atlantic Ocean in his song of the "Little Cargo-Boats," the English sea-tramps, which will soon be flocking to our shores, drawn by the twelve cents a bushel rate on wheat from New York to Liverpool like flies to the sugar bowl. In the line that follow, Kipling describes how the war risks, as far as the "tramps" are concerned, will be ignored, if not forgotten:

The Liner she's a lady by the paint upon 'er face
An' if she meets an accident they count it sore disgrace;
The Man-o'-War's 'er 'usband, and e's always 'ay by.
But, oh, the little cargo-boats, they've got to lo' or die!

The Liner she's a lady, and 'er route is cut a dried;
The Man-o'-War's 'er 'usband, and 'e always eps beside;
But, oh, the little cargo-boats that 'aven't an nan,
They've got to do their business first, and a the lost they can!

The Liner she's a lady, and if a war shoulcome,
The Man-o'-War's 'er 'usband, and 'e'd bler stay at home;
But, oh, the little cargo-boats that fill whevery tide!
'E'd 'ave to up an' fight for them, for by are England's pride.

The Liner she's a lady, but if she was made
There still would be the cargo-boats a 'come and foreign trade.
The Man-o'-War's 'er 'usband, but it's wasn't 'ere
'E wouldn't have to fight at all for 'e an' friends so dear.

MAY ALLOW GERMANY TO WORK WIRELESS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Germany has again protested against the American censorship of her wireless stations at Sayville, L. I., and Tuckerton, N. J., at the State Department through Charge d'Affairs Haniel von Haimhausen. Secretary Bryan referred the request to President Wilson.

The conviction is growing that the administration acted in unnecessary haste in restricting Germany from the free use of the wireless. It appears that the Hague regulations do not bar the operation of the two American wireless stations controlled by Germans as they are not maintained for purely military purposes. The German stations enjoyed generally commercial business.

It is expected that the German contention will be sustained by this government as it appears unfair that Great Britain should have the advantage of cable communication to and from Great Britain while Germany is isolated by the cutting of the cables. The censorship will probably be removed from the Sayville station, which will enable Germany to send messages to and from the station at Neuen near Berlin.

The President's decision is awaited with great interest. A decision in favor of Germany is expected to draw a strong protest from Great Britain.

Owing to congestion of the cables the United States was obliged to use the cable via Rome to reach points in Europe. There is a heavy congestion of outgoing messages from the United States at London and Copenhagen.

The delay at London is due to the cutting of the German cable line near the Azores by British ships.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—T. Romike, general manager of the High Frequency Machine Company, which is a wireless station at Tuckerton, N. J., said yesterday that his company hopes to be sending messages direct to Germany this morning. Some thousand words are waiting for transmission, and under perfect conditions could be sent in three hours.

Scarcely any messages have been sent or received since Friday.

The Marconi Company has also protested against the censorship, through its president, Former Attorney General John W. Griggs, who wrote to Secretary of the Navy:

"We are aware of no statute of the United States or of any treaty or rule of international law which justifies the intervention of a government censor, or the stoppage of this company in sending messages in the ordinary way."

FRENCH TOWNS ARE SHELLED BY GERMANS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK,
Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—Several French frontier towns in the department of Meureh have been shelled by German artillery. The invaders have pushed heavy artillery over the border and French guns are being rushed to resist them.

France today is pouring reinforcements through the defiles of the Vosges Mountains to join the French forces in Alsace. In an official statement the French War Office says:

"The engagements which have taken place show that our artillery has a marked advantage over the German artillery. In all engagements the Germans have resorted to barbarious methods, shooting hostages without reason.

"Our strategical situation remains, as before, excellent. We are placing in Upper Alsace a considerable number of troops.

"The French town of Pont-a-Mousson, on the Moselle River, about five miles inland from the Alsatian border, has been partly destroyed by German artillery attached to the army of the Moselle. The cannonade was begun at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, the Germans using cannon of heavy calibre. Although the artillery was directed principally against houses away, the gunners showed precise accuracy and shells dropped in the streets in all parts of the town. Many of the inhabitants were killed and wounded and buildings were burned.

"Troops are massed in force around Nomeny and Chambrey, fifteen and twenty-seven miles south of Metz, and if not already shelled, the town are in danger of destruction by a bombardment. Heavy firing evidently of artillery, has been reported from Delincourt, fifteen miles southeast of Nancy, on French soil.

"French forces have seized the mountain passes of Bonhomme and St. Marie and planted artillery on the heights."

The belief prevails that the French army of invasion in Alsace is being pushed slowly westward. The Germans have prepared formidable fortifications, especially in the neighborhood of the town of Hardt, in the southern part of Lorrain.

The government is transporting vast quantities of ammunition to the eastern frontier on trains requisitioned for that purpose.

To encourage commerce during the war the British government will cover war risks on importations and exportations by sea. Vessels under the French flag will be covered to 80 per cent. of their value.

EXPECT NAVAL FIGHT SOON IN ADRIATIC SEA

By LAWRENCE ELSTON.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—England having severed diplomatic relations with Austria and declared that a state of war exists between the two countries, it is probable that a naval battle will soon be fought in the Adriatic.

A dispatch to the Star from Rome says that Captain Hamilton of the steamer Anchoria reported on his arrival at Venice from Fiume having sighted the Austrian fleet fifteen miles off Pola. They probably will be attacked by a British squadron from Malta.

BRITISH ADMIRAL REPORTS ATLANTIC SAFE FOR SHIPPING

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Admiral Sir Christopher Craddock, commanding the British West Atlantic fleet, has notified the British consul that the North Atlantic is now clear of hostile warships.

"Great Britain's West Atlantic fleet has swept the ocean between here and Europe clear of all hostile war craft, and conditions for shipping between the United States and English and French ports are now as safe as they were before the declaration of war," he says.

The news is taken to mean that the West Atlantic fleet has chased away the three German cruisers, the Strassburg, the Karlsruhe and the Dresden, which were in the American Atlantic at the outbreak of the war. As a result shipping between here and Europe will be resumed with a rush in the next few days.

The British warships have practically blockaded New York Harbor against German and Austrian mercantile craft, according to accounts of skippers allowed to pass in within the last twenty-four hours.

In addition to the British fleet, two French cruisers, one Japanese and the Conde, are patrolling the Atlantic.

Why Cadum is Good for Skin Diseases

The important thing in treating many skin diseases is to keep water away from the inflamed parts and make the covering as air tight as possible. This, according to a very distinguished New York physician, seems to kill the germ and set up the healing process quickly. Cadum, the well-known skin remedy, supplies that kind of a covering and keeps out the air. This covering makes an impervious shell white wax, which Cadum contains. Two other ingredients of Cadum are zinc oxide, which dries up the water that comes from the sores, and oil of cade, which is one of the oldest and best known remedies for Eczema. Physicians everywhere employ oil of cade more often, perhaps, than any other one thing in treating Eczema. Cadum costs 10c for a trial box, while the 25c box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size.

ATTORNEY GENERAL BOYNTON STARTS RIGID PROBE OF FOOD PRICE JUMP

PELLETIER TO ASSIST STATE INVESTIGATION

District Attorney Pelletier today announced that he will be glad to assist in any way the investigation of the rise in prices of foodstuffs, which is to be conducted by Attorney-General Boynton.

Mr. Pelletier said that he will not attempt any independent investigation. The alliance of the attorney-general and the district attorney means that a searching probe of all advanced prices will be undertaken.

Where there appears to be no economic justification for price advances, it is the plan of the attorney-general to institute prosecutions.

Mr. Pelletier said today:

"In view of the announced intention of the attorney-general to investigate the recent increases in the prices of foodstuffs, it would be an unnecessary expenditure of the county's money for me to conduct a similar investigation.

"Mr. Boynton has broader powers than I. I should certainly have acted had he not announced his intention to act, and I shall be glad to assist him in any way."

Ten-cent sugar is predicted to-day as a result of yesterday's half-cent-a-pound advance, making the price today seven and one-half cents.

Potatoes sold today as low as twenty-four cents a peck, a drop of four cents a bushel from yesterday's prices. Beans, which are a favorite army staple, sell at various prices. California peas, bringing twelve cents a quart in some stores, and ten or less at the "chain system" groceries.

The prices are becoming so high that today the restaurant men and hotel managers declared that sooner or later they will be forced to charge higher prices for many of their dishes. For the present the larger houses can maintain their low levels of prices on the basis of stocks which they now have on hand, but when they have to buy again, they will be forced to boost prices, they declare.

The hotel men in some cases have already raised the prices of foreign liquors. Champagne is now sold to-day at an advance of $4 per case over the usual quotations. The canned trade has also been hit. In Boston alone, it is estimated, 1,000 barrels of sugar are consumed daily in the manufacture of candy.

CANNED GOODS HIGH.

It is predicted that the price of shoes may be affected by the rise. Sole leather has been advanced two cents a pound and upper leather one cent per foot. Calfskins have gone up one and one-half cents per pound and belting butts four cents per pound.

With the reopening of foreign trade it is expected that there will be a tremendous drain on the manufacturers from abroad. The armies must be shod. The soldiers must have new shoes every month at least, and probably more often than that.

Canners of vegetables, meats and other tinned goods are disturbed over the shortage of tin and the increase in the price of solder. The former is about sixty cents per pound in the market, as compared with thirty-one cents on July 20, while antimony, an essential of type metal, is at seventy-two cents as compared with seven cents a few weeks ago. But while foreign canned goods have risen in price, American canned goods have not been affected. It is reported, in fact, that a large consignment of California canned goods is now on its way East to relieve the situation.

Among the goods generally affected by price rise are nuts and raisins, spices, many medicines, laces, some linen goods, furs and hats, chinaware, gelatines, rice, macaroni, lemons, foreign soap and perfumery.

RAW SUGAR JUMPS.

Raw sugar at wholesale jumped to 5 cents a pound today, or a 100 per cent increase inside of two weeks. The price of granulated sugar at retail remained at 7½ cents in Boston.

Some authorities feel that refined in this country may easily go to 10 to 15 cents per pound. But any figure above 6 cents is dangerous to consumption and in the past has always worked automatically to check consumption.

Never in the history has the sugar trade witnessed a 100 per cent. jump in raw sugars in less than three weeks.

As the result of the war, the price of cocoa butter, which is extensively used in the manufacture of candy, had advanced over 30 per cent, or from 29½ cents a pound to 40 cents. The cocoa bean itself, which is an imported article, largely from Africa, has advanced 3 cents a pound.

Since the 10-cent a pound advance in cocoa butter one of Boston's largest cocoa manufacturers has sold 100 tons, which shows a profit of $20,000 above the normal profit.

Cocoa and chocolate have not been advanced to the consumer as would naturally be expected with the advance in coffee and tea, but this advance is bound to come in shipments of the bean from abroad are very greatly curtailed.

in this country, upon the protext of the conditions existing in Europe is so serious and vital a matter that I take the liberty of calling your attention to it.

I would be very much obliged if you would advise me whether there is, under existing law, any action which the Department of Justice could take either by way of investigation or legal process, and what federal legislation, if any, would in your judgment be justifiable and warranted.

I feel that this is a matter that we cannot let pass by without trying to serve the country. Certainly the country ought to be defended, if possible, against men who would take advantage of such circumstances to increase the price of food and the difficulties of living.

Faithfully yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

CONGRESS TO PASS LAWS.

The President's reference to the price increases as "unwarranted" served to crystallize public indignation. Members of Congress began discussion of the best method of dealing with the situation.

There took steps to introduce new legislation; and decided to enlist President Wilson's assistance, in the fight. They proposed to ask him to send a special message to Congress, protesting against the price advances and suggesting the new legislation should take.

Representative Howard of Georgia, Representatives Kelly and Farr of Pennsylvania, and Representative Kahn of California are among those who believe that the increases, particularly in the cost of sugar and flour, are due to the gambling operations of speculators in the market.

Representative Kahn suggested that a law be passed making it a penitentiary offense for two men to conspire or agree to raise the price of any article of food in interstate commerce. The proposal was received with approval.

A triple investigation of food prices in New York was swung into life today. District Attorney Charles S. Whitman ordered one probe, Borough President Marcus Marks directed another and Mayor John Purroy Mitchel set on foot a third.

District Attorney Whitman appointed William A. DeFord to conduct the investigation. A John Doe inquiry is probable, and reluctant dealers will be subpoenaed. The Grand Jury may be asked to act on the evidence secured.

Borough President Marks will work with the open Market Committee. Mrs. Julian Heath, president of the Housewives League, is attempting to organize a boycott to punish food robbery. She has written to United States District Attorney Marshall that she has information that carloads of meat are being held for war-time prices.

In Rhode Island the officials are taking action. Governor Pothier has determined on an investigation of the price-increase.

The federal Department of Justice may be asked to act.

J. Ogden Armour and Arthur G. Leonard, big Chicago packers, issued emphatic statements today charging that the increased meat prices are the result of a tremendous shortage, and that this shortage is the result of refusals by the farmers and stockmen to put their cattle, sheep and hogs on the market.

In spite of the statement that there was a meat shortage, the threats of prosecution and the anger of Chicago women resulted today in a drop in the prices of meat. Pork loins went down six cents a pound, and spare ribs were down four to five cents.

PRICES AT FISH PIER REMAIN AT NORMAL

While prices of most foodstuffs are soaring, it is a noteworthy fact that prices at the South Boston Fish Pier remain normal.

The only fish that are higher than normal are swordfish and mackerel. Swordfish is sell at eighteen cents a pound, three cents above normal. Fish dealers ascribe this rise to recent heavy fogs, which have prevented the fishermen from harpooning the swordfish. Small mackerel is selling at 3½ cents a pound, owing to the scarcity of that fish.

But there is a large quantity of other fish in storage and vessels are bringing in good catches. The prices on "ground fish" today were: Steak cod, 6½ cents a pound; market cod, 3½ cents; haddock, 3½ cents; pollock, 2 cents; large hake, 4 cents, and medium hake, 3 cents.

A large delegation of Boston suffragists, members of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association, will confer with Attorney-General Thomas J. Boynton at the State House Saturday morning to register a protest against the inflated prices of foodstuffs brought about by the European situation.

Miss Agnes Ryan of the Woman's Journal will head the delegation, which will consist of Mrs. Gertrude Smith Copeland and Miss Ethel Power, as well as other prominent Boston women.

TRIPLE INQUIRY ON FOOD PRICES IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—A triple investigation into the alleged conspiracy to boost food prices as a result of the European war is in full swing in New York today. They are being carried on by District Attorney Charles S. Whitman, Mayor John Purroy Mitchel and Borough President Marcus Marks.

The mayor will appoint a commission to get information; District Attorney Whitman will secure his facts through John Doe proceedings in the courts, and Borough President Marks will work through the open market committee, which will meet tomorrow afternoon. In addition to the activity of the municipal officials club women, headed by Mrs. Julian Heath, president of the Housewives' League, have taken steps to start a food boycott as a protest against the still high cost of living. She is issuing appeals directed to every housewife in the land to enlist in this war of defence.

After hearing a report that the meat packers are holding carloads of beef and other provisions in order to get war-time prices for them, Mrs. Heath wrote a letter to United States District Attorney Marshall asking him to take action. The New York investigation and campaign against higher prices for the necessities is part of a general campaign, in which the national government is involved in Washington.

Jason S. Bailey Safe in Coburg

A cablegram was received today from Jason S. Bailey, a well known Boston business man, who is among the Americans stranded in Europe, which stated that he was safe in Coburg, Germany. The message came by the way of Copenhagen.

NEW YORK CARES FOR PENNILESS REFUGEES

FUNDS GUARANTEED BY MAYOR MITCHEL

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The largest portion of 600 American refugees who arrived here last night from Europe on the liner Philadelphia left for their homes today. The majority of them, who were in a penniless condition when the ship docked, were met at the pier by friends with money or were apprised by telegram that funds awaited them at the different telegraph offices. A committee appointed by Mayor Mitchell gave immediate relief today to all the Americans who did not receive money upon their arrival, and has guaranteed to all the unfortunates that they will be advanced money for transportation tomorrow if funds are not received from their homes.

Refreshed by a night of uninterrupted sleep, the remaining refugees today looked back upon some of their experiences as being of an humorous nature. They laid stress upon the conditions aboard the Philadelphia which carried 1013 passengers, including 113 aliens—perhaps the biggest load in her career. Six hundred Americans occupied the cabin of the ship, crowding it to its extreme limit. In steerage there were about 198 Americans, while about 100 men, unable to get rooms of any kind, slept on the floors and tables each night during the voyage.

MRS. BARRINGTON IN STEERAGE.

Among those who had to take quarters in the steerage—and glad to get even such accommodations, were Mrs. W. C. Barrington of Philadelphia, daughter of Rear Admiral Kane.

The passengers today were high in their praise of the efforts of some of their fellow passengers, who formed a committee aboard which did everything possible to better conditions. Among the members of the committee were:

William Wood Plankington of Milwaukee, chairman; John A. Wilson, counsel of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.; Joseph Healey, Boston.

All of the passengers told of the stirring times in Europe that preceded the declaration of war by Germany on Russia and of subsequent events. Most of the passengers in addition to getting back penniless, also were without their trunks.

"We weren't much concerned about baggage," declared Martin Vogel of New York, assistant sub-treasurer of the United States.

"All we were keen about was getting aboard the first ship that sailed."

MISS WILDERMAN SORRY.

Miss Mary Wilderman of Pittsburgh, probably was the only one who wasn't happy over getting back to her native land. She had gone to Europe to study music four years ago, and was just having the finishing touches applied in Germany when the war broke out.

Chairman Plankinton of the relief committee aboard ship said the passengers took their discomforts with good grace.

"We all were so glad to be on the ship and away from Europe that we would have stood for almost anything," he declared.

"We had plenty of good food aboard ship, but we ran a bit short of water during the last two days. When we left London the city was in a wild state of excitement. There were many stranded Americans there.

"We were the last ship out of the Southampton Harbor, and when we pulled away from the dock there were hundreds of Americans there waving their tickets at us. Many of them were in tears."

WILSON APPEALS FOR FUNDS FOR RED CROSS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—As president of the Red Cross, Woodrow Wilson today addressed a letter to the American people asking all possible assistance in the work of reducing distress and suffering in the European conflict. The letter read:

To the People of the United States:

The present wars in Europe are certain to bring upon the Red Cross of the nations engaged a burden which demands the sympathy and aid of the world.

The American Red Cross is earnestly desirous of assisting its sister societies in their endeavor to alleviate distress and suffering among the combatants, and therefore appeals for funds to be expended impartially in relief of the sick and wounded soldiers of the nations at war.

Contributions for this purpose may be sent to the American Red Cross, Washington, D. C., or to local treasurers of the society in other cities. I confidently hope that the humanity and liberality of the people of the United States so often manifested in the past will cause them to respond promptly and generously to this appeal.

Vanderbilt Gives 60 Horses to Army

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—James T. Hyde of the National Horse Show Association of America, Ltd., wires that Alfred G. Vanderbilt has not only subscribed $5,000 to the Prince of Wales fund for the relief of the families of British soldiers and sailors, but presented his sixty valuable horses to the government for use in the army.

EDITH DEACON WILL HEAD "AMBULANCE CORPS" FOR FRENCH

Edith Deacon, youngest of the three famous Deacon girls of Boston, who is to succor wounded French soldiers on the battlefield.

The news comes from Paris that Edith Deacon, youngest of the three famous Boston Deacon girls, is heading a movement to organize an "American Ambulance Corps" to succor wounded French soldiers on the battlefield.

Mrs. Myron T. Herrick, wife of the American Ambassador, is president of the committee in charge of the organization. Besides Miss Deacon, other American women who are active are Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. E. H. Gary, Mrs. Henry Smith, Mrs. F. B. Kellog, Mrs. William Jay, Mrs. Frederic Allen, Mrs. Griswold Gray, Mrs. James Burden, Mrs. Dallihs, Mrs. Fred Blumenthal, Mrs. Kate Moore, Mrs. Barton French, Mrs. John Munroe, Mrs. Ralph Hickick, Mrs. Walter Gay, Mrs. Walter Farwell, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. H. B. Duryea, Mrs. Harjes, Mrs. Tiffany, Mrs. E. Tuck, Baroness von Reuter and Miss Gillette.

The French government has already gladly accepted the services of this American Ambulance Corps.

Miss Deacon's father, who spent many years of his life in France, was instrumental in organizing and financing a corps similar to this which served at the front in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870. Mr. Deacon at that time was connected with a banking house in Paris. The corps did valuable work in that war.

An appeal for funds in aid of the plan has been received in Boston.

The committee of American women has guaranteed to raise funds to finance the corps, and many of the American women in Paris have volunteered personally to serve with the troops to aid the wounded.

The eldest of the three Deacon sisters—Dorothy—is the Princess Radziwill. She has turned over one of her homes in Austria to be used as a hospital, and is endeavoring to return to the United States to remain till the war is over. The Prince is serving in the army.

Gladys Deacon, the second sister, though her name has been linked with those of many foreigners, is unmarried.

Miss Edith Deacon was engaged to George Lee Peabody, who died in 1911. She nursed him during his last illness, and he planned to leave her his fortune, but his illness made it impossible for him to draft a will. His family, upon his death, settled upon Miss Deacon $10,000 a year during her life.

GERMANS CHANGE COLOR OF UNIFORMS

BRUSSELS, Aug. 13.—German prisoners are being brought north from the scene of action. Among the first captives of war to arrive in Louvain were four young German officers, who attracted a great deal of attention as they were led through the streets. Their spiked helmets had been covered with brown Holland cloth to render them less conspicuous, and they seemed greatly dispirited.

In this respect the Belgians are at a disadvantage, as their uniforms, especially those of the cavalrymen, are brilliantly colored.

The German troops of all ranks of the service have been equipped with gray field uniforms, which easily melt into the color of the fields and roadways.

GREAT RISK IN TRAVEL.

Travel through Belgium is dangerous to the last degree. The allies are exercising extraordinary precautions. Motor cars trying to cross country held by the Belgians, French and English soldiers are stopped by hundreds of sentries. If a motor car does not stop immediately upon a demand for the countersign, the nearest post is likely to fire a volley into it.

A Belgian nobleman, Baron Van Zuylen, and a private soldier, who was acting as his chauffeur, were killed in this way on the Namur-Liege road while engaged in carrying provisions for the Belgian soldiers.

When the countersign was demanded, the baron's car slowed up and the proper word was given. However, a nearby patrol, noting that the car had not halted, supposed that the automobile contained a German officer who was trying to escape. Half a dozen Belgian cavalrymen galloped up and emptied their carbines into the motor car, killing both occupants.

In spite of the danger attending travel from town to town, many travellers are taking the risk. In view of the numerous bodies of civilians who are passing through the country, the war office has been highly successful in preventing a leakage of information relative to the operations of the Belgian armies. It is pretty well known where the French forces are located, although the war correspondents have been pledged not to reveal this information at this time.

Many stories of the brutality of the German troops continue to reach this city. It is said that when German cavalry enters a hostile town the officers first take possession of the municipal funds and the banks. All available funds are carried off.

In one place, so it is said in one message from the front, a German officer after taking possession of a Belgian town, came upon a draft in the strongbox in the office of the municipal treasurer. The officer took it to a bank where he demanded payment. The draft was cashed in the regular way.

High praise is being given the Duchess of Sutherland, the Countess Fourtales, the Countess Charcourt and other well known women who have established a hospital corps and ambulance service for care of the wounded. The hospital service has been installed in the Cercle Artistique, the most aristocratic club in Brussels, where operating tables and cots have been placed.

KING ALBERT ACTIVE.

King Albert is taking an active part in directing the operations of the Belgians. A telegram from Louvain says that the king passed through there in a muddy, travel-stained automobile nearly escaping recognition. The Belgian monarch was in a soiled, mud-stained uniform and was without any attendants.

An aviator, not long bearing any indication of the rank of its occupant, was continuously held up by sentinels, who roughly demanded the countersign.

BELGIANS IN AMBUSH TRAP MANY INVADERS KILL GERMAN PRINCE IN STREET BATTLE

By DR. E. J. DILLON.
Special War Correspondent of the Boston AMERICAN and the London Daily Telegraph.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 12.—It still is impossible to throw any light upon military operations which may culminate in a terrific collision between the forces of disruption and those of civilization. Never before, not even during the Japanese campaign against Russia, have movements of an army been shrouded with such impenetrable mystery, considering the number, the audacity and the ingenuity of German agents. Still, in Belgium, these precautions may be indispensable.

Another fact which is beginning to dawn upon the public is that the heroic resistance of the Belgian army was offered hitherto to covering troops only.

Although three German army corps have been thoroughly beaten, it is believed here that the hostile main armies may be ready any time.

Several detachments of the covering troops were sent forward to Belgian advanced posts as feelers.

The Belgians, when possible, concealed themselves in thickets or fields and captured a number of invaders.

One Belgian lancer named Sozaerts deserves special mention. His habit is to sally forth alone, lance in poise and dash forward against a Uhlan, whom he generally kills or wounds, whereupon the remainder give themselves up. In this way he has taken fourteen prisoners, wounded several Uhlans and killed three, without suffering the slightest injury.

AIRSHIPS SIGHTED.

Already airships of different combatants float gracefully into visual range of the Brussels population, but at such height that one can only guess at the nationality of each.

The authorities are warning the public neither to fear nor attack the Uhlans.

Anxiety respecting Holland's neutrality is not yet wholly dispelled. Nobody doubts the firm resolve of the Dutch government to maintain its right to hold aloof from war, but certain misgivings are entertained as to the adequacy of the troops stationed in the district where violation of territory by Germany is most probable.

A Belgian journalist narrates the death of the reigning Prince William of Lippe and his son as follows:

"In one of the streets of Seraing about one hundred German soldiers threw themselves with terrific fury upon a company of Belgians, but suddenly their commanding officer, Prince Wilhelm of Lippe, fell mortally wounded. Immediately afterward his son was killed. The Germans retreated, and shortly afterward the bodies of the two princes were demanded of the foe. They were deposited provisionally in a vault in Seraing Cemetery. Diamond rings which the reigning prince wore on his fingers and his daintily wrought sword were handed over to the police of Seraing by a Boy Scout."

"WOMAN" WAS SPY.

When leaving the American Legation I saw two municipal guards arresting a lady whom they politely conducted to the police station. A chauffeur cried: "That is no lady. He is a German spy."

Two men, hearing this, rushed up and attempted to maltreat the prisoner, but the guards protected their charge effectually.

At the station the prisoner, who looked quite collected, was found to be a male German agent possessed of apparatus for cutting telegraph wires. He also carried compromising documents.

The American Minister, who has been charged with the task of protecting Germans, was astonished by the many touches of good nature, may tenderness, displayed by the Belgian soldiers, police and people toward the subjects of a state which is waging cruel war against this country.

Special trains are conducting civilians to Holland and special motor cars convey them to the American consul, or to restres where they are housed and fed until they are ready to start.

GERMANS NINE DAYS BEHIND SCHEDULE, WAR EXPERT SAYS

By BURTON L. FRAZIER.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—A British military expert who has a deep knowledge of the organization of the German "war machine" declared today that the Kaiser's troops were actually nine days behind the schedule laid out by the general staff at Berlin for the attack on France.

"It is interesting to note," he said, "that the bombardment of Pont-a-Mousson and the fortifications of the Nancy district had been set for the first and second days of the mobilization.

"As a matter of fact, the bombardment of Pont-a-Mousson occurred on the eleventh day and it will not have the demoralizing effect that Germany expected it to have."

BELGIAN CAVALRY MEETS HEAVY LOSSES

BRUSSELS, Aug. 13.—The War Office admitted today that the Belgian cavalry had suffered heavy losses in the fighting at Tirlemont, but declared that the allied Franco-Belgian infantry had checked the advance of the German forces.

It is reported that heavy fighting is going on today and that the Germans have brought their artillery into play with deadly effect on the advance forces of the allies.

The Belgian Lancers, the finest cavalry of the kingdom, bore the brunt of the opening engagement at Tirlemont and fought with great valor, charging the Germans in the face of a heavy fire from machine guns. Describing one charge made by a small force of Lancers against 2,000 Uhlans, the War Office states that the Belgians killed 250 of the enemy, but themselves lost only twenty-five men. Among the Belgians killed were Captain Knappon and Lieutenant Count Van Der Burch.

Concluding its statement the War Office said:

"The Lancers were checked by the machine guns, but the Belgian infantry stopped the Germans."

Another official announcement read as follows:

"Belgian and French troops have effected a junction south of Brussels. The German advance in the Belgian provinces of Limburg and Brabant has been checked. The Germans are bringing up heavy artillery against Liege."

The government has restored communication with Liege by a roundabout route and today it was stated that not only were the besieged forts still holding out but the Belgian troops to the west of the city had resumed the offensive, and after a sharp struggle driven the Germans back, recapturing ground that had been lost.

One detachment of the Belgian cavalry working around to the rear of the Germans, blew up a number of bridges and cut the enemy off from supplies. One report says that the German cavalry to the southwest of Liege was compelled to fall back.

AN EXPLANATION OF THE WAR NEWS

It must be noted that most of the war news is coming from English, French, Belgian and Russian sources, and therefore presents their views of the situation, which must necessarily differ widely from the German view.

Such news as comes from Berlin shows the results of the fighting both on land and sea in a different light.

GREAT BATTLE NEAR BRUSSELS IMMINENT

By ALAN WILSON.
Special correspondent of the American and the London Times.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 13.—Brussels today is in a state of the most acute tension. Just as ninety-nine years ago it awaited the issue of the mighty combat at Waterloo to the death, the city waits. Destruction and death threaten fearfully on this Summer morning.

The situation is critical beyond the possibility of exaggeration. Forty miles away, along the banks of the Meuse, the mighty hosts of the Kaiser under the forts of Liege lie massed for a great wide-flung attack on the Belgian positions.

The troops of Belgium to whom are joined their allies, the French, await its terrific onslaught. Along the line from Liege to Namur apparently pitched battle is imminent. The atmosphere of the place is compelling beyond words. One is instantly held and bound by it. Illusion is impossible. Here is a people in the throes of a life and death struggle.

WAR FOR HOME AND FAITH.

Every man, every woman, every child knows it. The thought of failure—even temporary failure—is too horrible to contemplate. As one soldier to whom I spoke today declared: "We have confidence because we cannot believe that such agony is in store for us. God will not desert us."

This, then, is a war for a home and for faith; in the truest sense, a holy war. It has united all classes. It has made the nation one man. Workmen lay telegraph wires, handle trains, perform all manner of services in many cases without reward. In the country villages peasant women bring bread and beer for the soldiers, giving their best freely. They scorn payment.

If Germany elects to fight in the neighborhood of Tourlemain, Liege will be upon her flanks. The movement of the Belgian army from Louvain southward to link with the French has been proceeding steadily. The German lines have made an effort to prevent the junction, skirting intensified forts to the northward. German horsemen have taken Vise after a bitter struggle. The famous Uhlans and the no less famous death's head Hussars are the chief actors in this movement.

OCCUPATION OF TONGRES.

One next hears of the northern reconnaissance at Tongres, situated a few miles west of Vise, nearer the line of march, between Louvain and the French position at Tongres occupied by the Germans Sunday morning.

It was a terrible moment for the inhabitants when, at 10 o'clock, they saw a detachment of cavalry marching in good order up the main street. In an instant the dreaded uniforms were recognized and the scene of peace became a spectacle of panic. The cry, "The Germans are upon us," rang through the town. Windows were closed and barred shutters went up and doors were locked. Within a few moments the streets were empty and deserted. Tongres was a place of the dead.

DEFIED BY MAYOR.

Refugees have described the scene. Soldiers took the town hall, ordered the Mayor to produce his money chest and to lower the Belgian flag. To the first request he acceded, to the second he refused. Thereupon the Germans, with considerable good humor, took the flag down themselves.

At the postoffice 10,000 francs were seized and demands were then made for food for the hungry troops. This was procured and paid for out of the plunder and the Germans feasted in the market place.

The inhabitants had by this time got over their first fear and began to gather round their foes.

"You are the Uhlans?" some one asked. "Yes, from eastern Prussia," was the reply. "For my own part I am a Dantzig man. They fetched us in special trains without telling us where we were going. My comrades come, many of them, from Lubeck, in Schleswig-Holstein."

The soldier declared he had been assured that France was in the throes of revolution, that Servia was beaten, that the Russians and Japanese were once more at each other's throats, hence that not a man of the Czar's army would ever cross the German frontier. When the truth was made known he seemed staggered.

LIEGE CUT OFF.

Liege is occupied by the enemy. The Mayor was forced to issue a proclamation ordering the citizens to abstain from all warlike acts on pain of death. The railway station is closed and only a single locomotive remains. All official means of communication have been cut. Many citizens escaped on bicycles and afoot.

At Verviers, a small place to the north, a German Mayor has been appointed. At Warsage, also in the enemy's hands, the Mayor was roughly handled and some citizens were put to death for desisting the troops.

These occupations of small places by troops have no real significance. The main fact is that the main army formed at Louvain has been free to pass southward from there to join the French. It is a significant feature of the situation that in the capital one heard the sound of cannon, very distant but quite clear. All Brussels heard and with abated breaths all Brussels waits, and waits.

American Tourists Held in Switzerland

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 13, via London.—More than 10,000 American and English tourists are stranded in Switzerland as a result of the war. Some of them are hard pressed for necessities. A number have exercised their letters of credit for sums much smaller than they called for. The British Minister here has notified applicants that efforts to reach France are useless until mobilization of its eastern troops is completed by France.

GOLD SHIPMENTS TO CANADA A BANK OF ENGLAND MOVE

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

No change has occurred in conditions which rendered advisable the closing of stock markets and financial interests are awaiting some war development which will remove embargoes upon stocks and commerce.

The action taken by the New York Stock Exchange committee in regard to establishing a market between members on the basis of July 30 closing prices merely will enable cash transactions and facilitate the closing of outstanding accounts. But speculation is barred and there is still no market through which foreigners can liquidate holdings of American securities.

As regards any movement to induce this country to submit to being drained of its gold supply to pay foreign debts a New York banker said today:

"Talk of an immediate settlement in gold of a balance due England through sale of stocks in this market is theoretical and silly. There has never existed for any period of time a balance of exchange favorable to a country at war, and the settlement of all our obligations through the early shipment of grain, cotton and other commodities, without loss of gold, is to immediate prospect."

GOLD SHIPMENTS TO CANADA.

Prospective gold shipments to Canada are a matter of great importance in the eyes of American bankers who since the war began have been trying to conserve the yellow metal resources of the United States. When foreign exchange became inoperative, and much hazard attended gold shipments, a tributary of coin or metal by the sea route ceased. There were shipments to Canada after the ocean became unsafe, but insurance rates were almost prohibitive, but they were not thought important and it was believed for a time that gold in this country could be kept here. But the bank of England has arranged with the Canadian government for withdrawals from New York to Canada, and the extent this new movement may attain is as yet unknown. "The Colonial Finance Minister," it is called from London to Hearst newspapers, "will advise the Bank on the receipt of the gold, and the Bank will operate, if necessary, as if the gold were in its vaults." As this country at present owes Europe about $1,500,000,000, the cessation of gold exportation was a relief to American bankers. Now they are considering the possibility of withdrawals to Canada to an extent which will affect the reserves of banks in the United States.

RESERVE BOARD MAY ACT.

The Federal Reserve Board may consider this question. It is suggested already that the board is authorized by law to suspend every act and requirement pertaining to the reserve clause of the national bank act. In order to maintain this reserve it was stated in New York this morning, "bankers are formulating plans such as have never before been put in operation in this country, at least since the passage of the national bank act fifty-one years ago." It is suggested that if the new Federal Reserve Board does not feel "yet organized and operative" that Congress should be asked to authorize banks to count national banknotes as part of their reserves. Chairman Glass of the House Banking Committee says Congress will not do it, and Paul M. Warburg says the Reserve Board has no power to act. Great Britain evidently is not so well prepared for war as some other combatants, or she might not find it so important that the Canadian, South African and Australian governments should accept "deposits of gold on behalf of the Bank of England to avoid the dangers of ocean transport" when London cables to newspapers announce that the German fleet is "bottled up" and it is still the boast of the English everywhere that "Britain rules the waves."

On August 6 last the gold holdings of England had decreased $51,000,000 to $138,000,000 from the October 8, 1913, when fighting began in the Balkans. During that period the gold holdings of Russia had increased $93,000,000 to $577,000,000, those of France $176,000,000 to $723,000,000, while Germany had increased its hoard from $131,000,000 to $323,000,000. Austria-Hungary's stock of gold had decreased $2,000,000 from $259,000,000 to $257,000,000. These figures may be of interest as indicating which nations were busiest in preparing for war.

It is estimated that gold in the United States amounts to about $1,500,000,000. The wheat that Europe is going to buy of us, if we can deliver it, will liquidate wholly or in part all we owe on the other side of the Atlantic. But there is enough transportation hitch, present or prospective, to make that less of a ledger factor than is ordinary. Anyhow banking and other sentiment is against allowing the gold resources of this country to be depleted. Europe is employing the moratorium to avoid prompt payments of debts owed in that part of the world, but there never was more eagerness abroad to collect immediately from Americans than at present. While England wants a large amount of gold, variously estimated at from $25,000,000 to $100,000,000, taken from New York to Ottawa for Bank of England credit, France has deposited $5,000,000 more gold at the Paris branch of J. P. Morgan & Co. to increase French purchasing credit in the United States. It now totals $12,000,000.

RECEIVER ASKED FOR ASSOCIATED TRUST, BIG HOTEL OWNERS

A bill in equity asking a receiver for the Associated Trust has been filed by John Lucas & Co. of Philadelphia and Boston. The defendants are Fred F. Blanchard, Judd Dewey, Charles A. Digney and F. W. Norris, the trustees, individually and as trustees.

The Lucas company claims that the Trust is carrying much property at a loss, and that the earnings of productive properties are being diverted to keep up the unproductive properties.

It is asked that the defendants be restrained from selling or transferring in any way the property of the Associated Trust, and a receiver is asked. The prayer also asks that all property of the Trust be reached and applied in payment of the debt of the plaintiff and all other creditors who shall become party plaintiffs.

The Lucas claim is an outstanding balance of $6218.54. Joseph B. Jacobs is handling the case. An order of notice has been made returnable Monday.

Till recently, Mr. Blanchard was the sole trustee; then Dewey, Digney and Norris were added.

The trust's last annual statement shows it controls property of an assessed valuation of over $4,000,000, and has assets totalling $2,324,000. The report pointed out how the trust has grown since 1907, when its assets were $211,000. Its surplus was given as $217,454.62.

The trust controls forty-one properties, including the Hotel Lenox, Hotel Buckminster and Hotel Coolidge, together with many apartment properties and apartment hotels in Brookline and the Back Bay. It has done a large business in first mortgage bonds. It recently moved into new offices in its own building on Franklin street.

Says Lightship Saw British Warship

The United Fruit Company steamer San Jose reported today that the lookout at the Nantucket lightship had sighted a British warship early yesterday morning, steaming in an easterly direction. Though the San Jose flies the British flag, Captain McKinnon declared he had taken no unusual precautions to avoid capture at sea. The ship brought 45,000 bunches of bananas from the West Indies.

White Print Paper Advances in Price

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Sharp advances in the prices of white print paper as a result of the European war were announced here today. On some of the better varieties the prices went up three cents per pound. Paper manufacturers expressed the belief that there would be no paper famine in this country, but admitted that prices would be considerably higher.

Australians Want to Fight for England

MELBOURNE, Aug. 13.—The war spirit spread rapidly throughout the Australian commonwealth today, and there were numerous patriotic manifestations in behalf of the British Empire. The request is being made to the English government that the commonwealth be allowed to raise a force to be known as the Australian Imperial expeditionary force. Many youths from sixteen to twenty years old are seeking to enlist.

Servians Ambush Austrian Troopers

NISH, Servia, Aug. 13.—A detachment of Austrian troops that crossed the River Save by boat, near Obrenovatz, was ambushed by Servians, and most of the soldiers were killed or captured, it was announced at the War Office today. Montenegrin forces are taking the offensive at all points and have renewed the bombardment of Cattaro.

King George Cuts High Cost of Table

LONDON, Aug. 13.—An issue of the official circular announces:

"By order of the King, plain living is now the rule at the royal table."

The AMERICAN correspondent learns on the highest authority that plain living at court means the cost of the royal table has been reduced from the equivalent in American money $2.50 per head a day to $1.25.

Dinner at Buckingham Palace now consists of four courses, soup, fish, joint and sweets. It used to consist of six courses. All entrees have been abolished. Breakfast consists now of fruit and porridge. Fish is served two days a week, and eggs and bacon one.

The cost of living in Servants' Hall has been reduced from $1.44 a day to eighty-eight cents.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It if Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that every one should use:

5 grains Optona (1 tablet).

The whole or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple directions given, will, in most cases, sharpen the vision and quickly relieve inflammation, sore, tired eyes and other similar troubles. Eye glasses benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the sick and contains no ingredient which would irritate the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

BRAVES AND GIANTS CLASH
IN BIG BATTLE FOR LEAD
IN GREAT PENNANT RACE

RUDOLPH OPPOSES GIANTS

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—New York, baseball crazy, is waiting tensely for the start of the great series this afternoon between the Boston Braves, holders of second place, and the champion Giants.

Not for years has the coming of any invading team, save possibly the Athletics in world's series time, been awaited with such trepidation.

For the Giants fear the fighting, rushing Braves. Right on the top of a mad climb from the bottom of the list, the Stallings stars have been sweeping all before them for more than a month.

Neither the Cardinals, who have just left after breaking even in a four-game series, nor the Reds, who took four out of five from the Giants lately, could break through the wonderful pitching and the marvellous defence of the Boston outfit.

LONG WINNING STREAK.

For a month and a half now the Braves have been winning seven games out of eight, winning them by real finishes that tell the pennant spirit, while in the same time the Giants have just about been able to win as many as they have lost.

As the two teams have battled practically the same enemies, there seems to be some cause for the local fear of today's opponents.

Just now the Giants are six and a half games ahead of the Boston club, but five weeks ago that margin was fifteen games. The Giants' pitchers have been going none too well, while even the Brave rookies have been pulling desperate games out of the fire.

The "Big Three" of the Boston pitching staff—Tyler, James and Rudolph—are prime to be worked in the series. Rudolph has won eight straight, James seven in a row and Tyler his last four full games, while he held the Reds scoreless in thirteen innings over in Boston Tuesday. Which, no matter how you look at it, is some pitching.

GIANTS READY FOR BATTLE.

McGraw will doubtless use Tesreau, Maquard and Matty in the order named, for the three big battles. Not one of them of late has displayed anything like the consistent form of the Boston trio.

Captain Johnny Evers, who has been playing the greatest game of his long career this season, rejoined the Braves today and will make them harder than ever to overcome.

The Trojan has been out of it for a week now on account of the death of his daughter Helen, but even with such an important link missing, the Hub team has been winning day after day.

A happier, more confident bunch than the Boston squad that arrived here last night would be hard to find. Rain yesterday gave them a chance to get in an unexpected day of rest, and consequently they are fit as fiddles for the opener today.

Manager Stallings, perhaps today the most famous baseball figure in the country, predicted a good showing for his club.

HARD FIGHT IS SURE.

We have the best team in the National League today and are glad of it. Have a chance to get closer to first by battling the leaders.

All our pitchers are in fine form and every man on the team is in perfect shape. The players have the greatest spirit I have ever seen, and if we don't win we'll sure give a good account of ourselves.

Manager McGraw, the Giant directer, on the other hand, did not appear too happy, though he was sure, or appeared to be, that his team would pull out all right in the big series.

"We are going good again now," said Mugsy this morning, "and we'll take care of the Braves, don't worry. For the past couple of years the Giants have always rallied when pressed, and, unless I miss my guess, they're going to repeat right now.

"We realize that we are up against a mighty fast team, but we've had the same old fights other years and always came out on top."

TESREAU AND RUDOLPH

So much for the managers. The fact remains that this city is baseball mad and record crowds seem due to watch the battles of the next three days up at the Polo Grounds.

The opening looks like a duel between Jeff Tesreau and Dick Rudolph, the long and short of it in the pitching line. Big Jeff won his last time out and seems to have recovered the form that made him such a terror a few weeks ago, while the Boston star has been pitching so long that he forgets how it feels to lose.

Besides, he has always had something on the Giants here, and this fact is not causing the faithful followers of the Giants any unnecessary pessimism as the time of the start draws near.

Yale Football Men Start Work Sept. 8

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 13.—Yale's preliminary football work will begin September 8, when a small squad of largely backfield players will be gathered at Madison, a shore town about eighteen miles east of this city. Head Coach Frank Hinkey will meet about twenty-five candidates there and will drill them twice daily.

STALLINGS EXPLAINS WHY HE EXPECTS TO WIN A PENNANT NOW

By GEORGE STALLINGS,
Manager of the Boston Braves.

With the big series right on us today, I'm perfectly satisfied with my team. We're ready in every position to make the battle of our lives. I would not venture to predict anything, but if we don't start some excitement, I'll be a very much disappointed individual.

The Braves have been going at a wonderful clip lately and unless something entirely unforseen intervenes, will keep right on at the same job.

The great sweep over all comers may be attributed to three things:

The wonderful spirit, the old winning spirit, of every man on the outfit.

The great condition of the three regular pitchers.

The almost perfect defence which the infield is able to put up in the face of all kinds of hitting.

As to the first, let me say that going into the game with the idea that you're going to win is always at least half the battle. And in my long career as a manager, I've never seen any team so chock full of confidence as the Braves.

They've just like boys. They're out to win and win they will, or die trying. I can say readily enough that there are teams in the National League stronger than ours individually. But there's no team with anything like the punch we have.

BRAVES NOT A ONE-MAN TEAM.

That's why we have been coming through. We are not a one-man team. Johnny Evers is one of our strongest links, offensively and defensively. Yet lately, the Braves won eight out of nine games when Johnny was missing.

"Rabbit" Maranville is another very important factor but the fact remains that the two games recently which saw the "Rabbit" out of it were credited to us.

Why? Simply because we haven't an "average" player on the list. Every man plays team all the time. When one of the regulars gets knocked out for a time, the sub goes in and breaks his back to keep the good work up. Any player trying is an asset to a team.

NINE MEN WORK TOGETHER.

We always have nine men working their hardest, and consequently we have been winning the big majority of our games. Any team with the same spirit would perform in an exactly similar fashion.

Regarding the pitchers, I feel that it would be wasting words to talk about the performances of Tyler, Rudolph and James. The three have been winning right along. Each is as strong as a horse and thrives on hard work. That's why I have been using them and letting the others sit on the bench. I didn't want to break a winning combination.

HAS PLENTY OF PITCHERS.

Not that I haven't plenty of pitchers. I have almost too many, if such a thing is possible. My so-called second string men are far and away better than the first string hurlers of most of the teams in the league.

Hess, Strand, Crutcher, Cottrell, Davis and Coorman are one and all as good as they make them. Before I come back from the present trip around the circuit I expect to show the baseball managers of the National League something in the line of crack young pitchers.

All the youngsters early in the season had some faults, to be sure, but careful coaching by Fred Mitchell has succeeded in wiping out the most of them. Just you watch.

I am not given to talking about myself, but I feel that I do know a pitcher when I see one. And I will say without reserve that I honestly believe I have the best pitching staff in the business.

Finally, to get down to our defensive strength, Maranville and Evers around second are the greatest combination that ever played the game together, bar none. Between them they can pull off almost anything. They have killed off more hits this year than have most entire teams.

SCHMIDT "SNAKES GOOD."

Schmidt on first base has always been a strong favorite of mine. When he was just getting used to himself as a big leaguer he looked rather rough. But I think that lately he has shown that he merited all the confidence placed in him.

Over at third base we are doubly fortified. Charlie Deal, though he has been sick all season long, has been playing mighty fine ball. With a short rest, he'll be as good an infielder as there is anywhere. And he sure can hit—any kind of pitching too.

"Red" Smith, whom we secured from Brooklyn lately, is another great acquisition. I don't understand yet why the Dodgers were willing to part with him. He's a brainy ball player, can hit and field, and is full of fight. Whitted and Dugey are two mighty capable "subs." Won't be long before the pair of them will be knocking at the door stamped "regular job," either.

OUTFIELD IS STRONG.

In the outfield, where we were weak last year, we sure have a great bunch of talent now. I have three good men who can bat right handed and face all kinds of pitching and three more who hit from the off side, and consequently can work havoc with right hand pitchers. Beat thing about the most of them is that they're young and coming all the time.

Behind the bat also, with Hank Gowdy and Bert Whaling, there's no cause to worry. Hank has surprised me by the wonderful improvement he's shown in the last month or two. Today there are few, if any, backstops who have anything on him.

Bert Whaling, too, is a good receivable catcher, one calculated to keep pitchers down on the ground all the time. Also he can hit a bit, especially in the pinches.

Then to fall back on, we have "Jiggs" Donahue, a Somerville youngster, who some day is going to be a star, and Fred Mitchell, who does most of the coaching, but who can go in and catch a game any time I need him.

There you are. We have plenty of good players, are close to the front and rushing along faster than any team in the league. As I have said, we have enough and plenty of pep, winning spirit. So we're a mighty good looking pennant proposition to my way of thinking.

Boston Yacht Club Races.

The Boston Yacht Club races for the Quincy challenge cup will start next Monday off the Marblehead station and some great racing is predicted. The races will be held daily until a winner is declared.

'WATCH US GO,' SAYS MANAGER BILL CARRIGAN

FENWAY PARK, Aug. 13.—The Red Sox are back home after a successful invasion of the West. They took ten of the fifteen games on the road and plan to better their average in the twenty games to be played in the scheduled sojourn on the home grounds.

The Lannins still have the pennant fever and their one ambition is to overhaul the Athletics. Most of the boys are somewhat jealous of the popularity of the Gaffney outfit and they will go after the Yankees this afternoon determined to impress the home fans that there are two pennant contenders in this city.

Ambition, hope, ginger, optimism and a host of other things are to be found in the present makeup of the club and President Lannin today is more pleased with the outlook right now than at any time since the opening of the season.

"The boys are in their stride," said Manager "Bill" Carrigan. "Watch us go from now on. Practically every man on the team is in fine shape, and barring accidents we hope to leave Boston, after the present series, fighting neck and neck with the Philadelphia team."

Though the Carrigans made a good record out on the trials their standing today as compared with that of the leading Mackmen is much poorer than it was when they departed on the trip.

Going away they were six and a half games in the rear, while at present the gap between first and second places is ten full contests. Almost impossible to overcome at this late day, but while there's life there's hope.

The Athletics, out in the West the same time as the Red Sox, played sixteen games and dropped but two of them, and accordingly gained three and a half games on the Red Sox, who were doing their ten and five stunt.

Today's game will likely see either Collins or Dutch Leonard on the firing line for the Carrigans. Both southpaws are in fine fettle and perform with ease on the road. Leonard, especially, added to his long string of victories and incidentally shone as the star relief box artist of the circuit.

Zimmerman Fined for Fighting Roger

NEW YORK, Aug. 13—Heinie Zimmerman, the belligerent third baseman of the Cubs, who resented Hooper Brennahan's sarcasm with blows during Tuesday's game in Brooklyn, was fined $100 by Manager Hank O'Day. Zimmerman was held entirely responsible for the brawl by the manager. Secretary John A. Heydler of the National League announced yesterday that Governor Tener had not acted upon the report of Umpire Mal Eason in reference to the fight.

Zimmerman did not appear in uniform at Ebbets Field yesterday. He obtained leave from O'Day when he announced that his arm was too sore to play. Heinie did not appear at the Colonial Hotel all day. This gave rise to a rumor that he had deserted the club. The story was denied late last night by his family, which lives in the Bronx. It was said there that Zimmerman had gone directly to the train from his home.

Peter Volo Sets Up New Stallion Record

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Aug. 13.—Peter Volo was the star of "Pop" Geers day. This colt, champion both as a yearling and two-year-old, won the Horseman Futurity for three-year olds and established a new stallion record for three heats for all ages.

In his first heat, Peter Volo won in 2:04¾, equaling the record held by Colorado E. He was jogging at the end and could have put the mark down around 2:04, as he went the first three-quarters at a 2:03 gait.

New Auto Record.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Aug. 13.—Teddy Tetzlaff, in a 300-horsepower racing car, drove half a mile on the natural salt bed at Saldura, Utah, about 100 miles west of here, at the rate of 251-5 seconds for the mile, which is one-fifth of a second under the world's record.

East Boston Wins Inter-District Swim

East Boston, with 66 points, won the inter-district swimming meeting at Wood Island Park. North End was second with 22, and Charlestown third with 8. The competition was a preliminary to the finals that will be held in the Charles River Basin August 28. For East Boston, the Misses Annie McNamara and Isabell Lavery in the junior and senior events, respectively, scored 20 points, each having earned 10. Isadore Lindsky's win of the 220-yard race over Stewart Guthrie and J. Santuosso was the biggest surprise.

BIKE OVAL HEAD BALKS AT CARD OF 2ND RATERS

The international sprint match which was slated for the Revere Cycle Track last Tuesday evening and which was put over on account of the rain, has been indefinitely postponed owing to the fact that Manager Butler was unable to get the "big four" together again this week.

Plans have been completed, however, for the holding of the national middle distance championships, the first heat of which will be run off at the beach oval next Saturday evening. The distance will be twenty-five miles and will have Lawrence, Mitten, Madono and Hansen as the riders, the winner to qualify in the finals.

A special match race has also been arranged between Jackie Clarke, the crack Australian, and Ceasar Moretti, the Italian champion. It was also announced today that the tickets issued for Tuesday's meet will be good on Saturday evening.

The mixup over the international sprint match has caused considerable comment among the fans, and Manager Butler gave out the following statement today, which explains the substitution of Moretti for Kramer and the second postponement of the meet:

Kramer, Ritt, Godsets and Clarke were signed up to ride at Revere Tuesday. Monday evening I received word that Kramer was indisposed and was not able to fill my card with Moretti, the star sprinter, to fill in, but rather than disappoint the fans decided to pull the race off altogether until I could get the top liners for the beach fans.

In making this decision I knew the fans will stand by, as I know they would not be satisfied with Ritt racing against time other fairly seasoned.

Kramer's rather sudden illness or refusal to ride here against his most feared and closest rivals for the title is somewhat a puzzle to me in view of the fact that while he could not ride here Tuesday evening, he readily agreed to ride at Brighton Beach last night against some of the very men he was to meet here.

Kramer has nothing or no one to fear here unless it is the men selected to race against him.

Syracuse May Be in Federal League

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 13.—This city expects a berth in the Federal League next year, provided arrangements can be made for Sunday baseball. This is the promise of President James A. Gilmore of the "outlaws" to the Syracuse men who are backing the project.

Former Mayors Alan C. Forbes and Edward Schoeneck, Mayor Louis Will, Frank Huller and other prominent Syracusans are reported to have offered the Federal League executives $100,000 to include Syracuse in the 1915 circuit.

A meeting of the backers of the new club and representatives of the "Feds" was held today. Those interested do not expect much trouble in securing the right to play ball on Sundays.

Rival Shoe Teams in Big Saturday Game

A large delegation will accompany the Queen Quality baseball team to Beverly on Saturday to see their favorites play the United Shoe Machinery nine in connection with the annual Sam Stone Day celebration. Manager John Godsell, of the Queen Quality team, has strengthened his nine for this battle, and is sure his boys will come through victorious. Johnny Murray, who pitched for the Queen Quality team at the start of the season, has rejoined the team and will be in the box Saturday.

Fitchburg Semi-Pros to Play Pilgrim Team

FITCHBURG, Aug. 13.—Tommy Sellers will get back into semi-professional baseball Saturday, when his all-star Fitchburg team lines up against the Pilgrims of Boston at the New England league park. This will be the first big game since Fred Lake transferred the league team to Manchester. Sellers has signed several college stars.

Langford-Johnson Battle to a Draw In Fast New York Go

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Sam Langford and battling Jim Johnson of Philadelphia, went ten rounds to a draw before a large crowd in the Stadium Athletic Club.

Both men gave and received terrific punishment.

Langford floored his man in the seventh, and smothered with right and left swings to the nose and chin. Johnson got mad and evened things up, but he fared perceptibly.

The rest of the bout was an even go for both men, but in the last minute of the ten-round Langford sent in three stiff jabs.

New Star for Senators.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 12.—Henri Rodeau, Minneapolis outfielder and catcher, has been purchased by the Washington Americans. In exchange for him, the local club will get four players as yet unnamed. Rodeau is to be delivered by January 1.

Tigers Buy McMullan.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 13.—Fred McMullan, third baseman of the Tacoma Northwestern team, has been sold to the Detroit Americans.

BUNDY LIKELY TO TEAM WITH M'LOUGHLIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—While the American committee still is wrestling with the question of who shall constitute the doubles team tomorrow, the opening singles matches in the Davis Tennis Cup series will be played today.

The committee announced today that it was undecided as to who would team up with Maurice E. McLoughlin in the doubles, and that the final decision would not be arrived at until tonight. However, it is believed that the committee will decide against itself and choose Thomas C. Bundy, the man upon whom McLoughlin has insisted. The committee feels that Karl Behr is a far better man than Bundy, but McLoughlin, who has teamed with Bundy for years and knows his style of play, declares that he must have Bundy as his partner. Rather than antagonize McLoughlin, the committee it is said will name Bundy.

The matches this afternoon will begin at 2 p. m. an hour earlier than the original time set. This action was taken because it is feared the matches will be drawn out and, if started at 3 p. m., would not conclude until dark. The Australians who face the Americans in the battle for the trophy were reported to be in fine shape today. Wilding's ankle, which he twisted slightly on Monday, seems fully restored.

There will be five matches, the outgoing to the team that takes three out of the five. Today two singles will be played, then the doubles and then two more singles.

In today's matches R. Norris Williams, 2d., will face Anthony F. Wilding, and McLaughlin will battle with Norman E. Brookes. Wilding and Brookes will team in the doubles for the Australians on Friday and on Saturday Brookes will meet Williams, while McLoughlin plays the final match with Wilding.

Every one of the 12,000 seats for each of the games has been sold.

Baker for White Sox.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Howard Baker, third baseman of the Evansville, Ind., club of the Central Baseball League, has been purchased by the Chicago Americans, according to an announcement by Charles Comiskey, president of the Chicago club. Baker will not join the major league club until next season.

Hans Wagner Meets Walter Johnson

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 13. — A sharp shower shortly before game time yesterday prevented the Phillies and Pirates from meeting in the final game of the series, but it did not prevent Hans Wagner and Walter Johnson from meeting and clasping hands for the first time in their lives. The Washington team, which opens a three days' engagement against the Macks here tomorrow, dropped into town early this morning and went to the ball park to see the game between the Phillies and Pirates.

Johnson has been a keen admirer of Wagner since his boyhood days, but never had met him. He made his way to the Pirates' bench and introduced himself to Hans. There was a quick, vigorous handshake, then a long foaming bee, which was broken up only when the acting manager of the Pirates was compelled to go out on the field for warm up practice. Then the rain came and Johnson and the rest of the Senators were doomed to disappointment.

The postponed game will be worked in during the Pirates' last trip to own on September 16.

Electric Light Meet at Fitchburg Fair

FITCHBURG, Aug. 13.—An electric light athletic meet September 2, on the second night of the Fitchburg fair has been sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. U., and efforts are being made to secure some of the crack athletes of New England to compete. Howard Drew and other famous sprinters have been invited to enter in the100 yard dash.

The events are 100, 440 and 880 yard races, a mile run, high and broad jumps, relay races and special events. J. Mullaney is managing the meet, to which entries close August 26. The Irish-American A. C. of Boston, through W. J. Foley, has agreed to make several entries and the B. A. A. athletic manager, George V. Brown, has under consideration o proposition to enter its relay team.

New Haven Golfer Wins Tavern Cup

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Aug. 12.—A swatfest for the Turner's Tavern Cup and club medals was played on the Bethlehem Country Club links with thirty-two entries. The cup was won by Charles L. English (4) of the New Haven Country Club. A match between teams representative of Sunset Hill House, Sugar Hill, N. H., and the Bethlehem Country Club was played today.

WINCHESTER TO PLAY WOBURN IN TITLE GAME

The championship of Woburn and Winchester will be decided at Woburn next Saturday when the all-Woburns and the Winchester town team clash at Library Park. The fans of both places have been wild for a game for the past two months, but somehow the two managers have not been able to come to an agreement until it was decided this week that the Winchester team would come to Woburn.

Interest in Woburn has reached the fever pitch and Woburn money, and there is plenty of it, finds ready backers among the Winchester enthusiasts. Both teams have remarkable records so far this season, and have both defeated the best semi-professional teams in the State.

Raymond Tufts, the former Brown and New York American twirler, is pitching for Winchester. He has three games have been clean shutouts, and he is well backed up by a fast aggregation headed by Ralph Wingate, captain of the Harvard baseball team.

Dr. McMahon, the former Holy Cross and Red Sox artist, is pitching fine ball for the Woburn team, and so far this season has allowed but an average of four hits per game. Bennett, this years Tufts backstop, is on the receiving end. Meehan of last year's Portland team is playing first with Drummond of Lowell New England League, Tom McNamara of Cambridge and Martin of somerville play the remainder of the infield.

Frank Hardy, a Woburn boy, one of the officials of the New England League, has been secured to umpire the game. Both teams will have bands, and arrangements have been made to accommodate several thousand fans.

Golfer Made 117-Yard Hole in Single Shot

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—While practicing over the Glen Oak golf course for the open invitation tournament, which begins there today and lasts until Friday, Fred Mcleod of the Chevy Chase Club of Washington, D. C., made the 117-yard fifth hole in one shot with a mashie. The ball landed within five feet of the cup and rolled in.

Helen Finds a Disquieting Letter About Little Winifred and Is Greatly Upset

Copyright, 1914, International News Service

"IS there anything in my box, 51?" and Helen leaned across the desk eagerly. The mail had just been sorted and placed in the boxes, and her weekly letter from her mother was late.

"Yes, Mrs. Curtis," said the clerk, handing a letter over which Helen seized eagerly. It bore the familiar postmark, and Helen decided to go upstairs to her room, where she could be alone to read it.

In the elevator she encountered Mrs. Raymond, who looked at her with an injured expression on her face.

"Where have you been keeping yourself lately, Mrs. Curtis?" she said, tapping Helen playfully on the arm. "I said to Mr. Raymond only yesterday that we rarely see anything of you since the accident. How nice for you that Mrs. Benbrook has been making things so pleasant lately!"—this last with a catty look to see how Helen was taking things; but Helen only smiled serenely.

She realized that Mrs. Benbrook and some of her friends had been very nice to her lately, and that the fact had seemed to worry Mrs. Raymond greatly, although she and Warren had fought shy of the Raymonds from the beginning of their stay.

"This is my floor, bye-bye," and Mrs. Raymond stepped out of the elevator nonchalantly humming a little tune. Helen stepped off at the third floor and a few minutes later was tearing open her letter. It seemed as though she could hardly wait to hear about Winifred.

"Dear Helen—Your father and I feel that we should write and tell you something that has worried us for some time. I have purposely avoided speaking of it in my letters for fear of worrying you unnecessarily, but after all, dear child, I think you ought to know. I shall come right to the point and tell you that Winifred is not so well as we would like to have her.

AN OPERATION NECESSARY

"For some time we believed that nothing was wrong that would not disappear with local treatment, but of late she has been so listless we thought it necessary to have a consultation on her case. Dr. Roberts had a city doctor down and they have decided that a slight operation must take place.

"Now, my dear, don't worry about this, because there is nothing very serious the matter with Winifred—nothing but what plenty of children have to go through at her age. I am sure that she will be much stronger in every way after it is all over. I have noticed that she has been mouth breathing properly and suspected that she had an operation for adenoids in her nose. I am telling you this so that you will realize that there is nothing to worry about.

"The question is, do you want the operation performed out here or would you rather bring Winifred on to the city with you? It won't be necessary for you and Warren to hurry your vacation at the Rust ranch out when you had planned to come, only I want you to know how much we stand before you arrive. With love, as ever, MOTHER."

Helen looked up from the letter with every bit of color gone from her face. Not worry? Of course she would worry, how could she help it? This was her punishment for leaving Winifred out West when she should have had a home with her parents, only Warren would never see it that way. Only this morning he had been trying to persuade Helen to stay at the shore for a couple of weeks without him.

"What's the use of your coming back to the heat of the city just because I have to?" he argued.

FEARS WARREN WILL OBJECT

But Helen had never been away without Warren in the whole course of their lives together, and she had laughed at him for suggesting such a thing. Now she wondered what he would do about Winifred. Of course he would scoff at the idea of her worrying about things. And he would never in the world consent to leave for Missouri immediately, that she knew.

Clearly there would be no pleasure left for Helen for the rest of the time she must spend on the shore, and even the slight relief that she might gain by writing her mother and telling her what ought to be done would have to be postponed until Warren came in. That might not be until dinner time, she reflected, for Warren had gone sailing and might be out all afternoon.

What could she do? She would write to her mother anyway and not wait for Warren—that would be the only thing to ease her mind at all. And taking some writing paper out of her portfolio she hastily began a letter to her mother.

"Dear Mother:

"Your letter regarding Winifred has driven me almost wild. I know you told me not to worry, but how can I do anything else? The thought of Winifred having anything the matter with her would worry me, and when I think of even a minor operation I can hardly bear it. It seems almost like a judgment upon us for leaving her with you for so long a time, but even now Warren cannot agree with me that we should have had her home long ago. He argues entirely from the point that she is so much better off where she is than she would be in the city.

"Of course you know I can decide nothing until Warren comes in. He has gone sailing and will be out all the afternoon, but I felt that I must write you anyway. It may be best to have the operation performed out there if the surgeon is competent, but of course that means that I must stay there with Winifred until she is well enough to travel, for Warren could never spare so much time away from business. As soon as he comes in I shall write immediately and advise you. I shall send this special so you will know the other letter is following rapidly upon its heels. I needn't tell you that my own heart is with you, mother, if anything should happen to Winifred, but then nothing could happen—won't think of such a things. Lovingly, HELEN"

Going down in the elevator Helen thought bitterly of the happy thoughts she had had just a short time ago going up.

SENDS LETTER SPECIAL

"I want to send off a special letter," she said to the clerk at the exchange. "Perhaps one of the boys could take it down to the postoffice for me—it is very important."

"Certainly, Mrs. Curtis; perhaps you can make the afternoon boat," and Helen had at least the satisfaction of knowing that her letter was off. If Warren would only come home early.

"When Mr. Curtis comes in will you tell him to come up stairs immediately?" The clerk nodded sympathetically. "I have had bad news from home," she added, as an afterthought, thinking that perhaps it would help him to remember to tell Warren. Then she went back to her room to wait.

It seemed hours before she heard Warren's step in the hall, when in reality it had only been a little more than an hour since she had mailed her letter. Then Warren came into the room and she sprang up to meet him.

"Oh, Warren, I have had another letter from mother about Winifred. The doctor thinks there should be an operation immediately."

"Operation—what for? Here, give me the letter." And Warren took the letter from Helen's hand and skimmed it hurriedly.

"Adenoids? Well, all children have adenoids nowadays; what are you worrying about anyway? I thought it was something terrible had happened."

"But, dear, she is so young, and it seems so terrible to have her so far away from us when she is sick. Oh, Warren, can't we go back and do you think we ought to have the operation performed out there or at home?"

Helen was almost crying.

"Well go out just when we planned we would, the first of September, and she can have it done right in Boston. An operation for adenoids doesn't amount to anything at all, kitten. I'll give you my word there isn't a thing to worry about."

On Turkish Inns

To the traveler accustomed to the luxury of up-to-date hotels a Turkish "kahn" (inn) comes as a rude surprise. One finds oneself suddenly whisked from the twentieth to the tenth century.

Beneath a central archway one passes into a quadrangle, which, with its fountain, suggests university precincts. The ground floor of the building forms the stables. Above are the guest rooms.

The principal guest room—the one above the entrance gateway—is allotted to travelers of note. It is innocent of the appointments proper to an European bedchamber, its furniture consisting merely of a roll of matting to spread on a low wooden platform, and an earthenware pipkin for water.

Mlle. Genevieve Vix, of the Opera-Comique, Paris, says: "My opinion of Savon Cadum is that it's tise soap."

Bad complexions are more often due to parasites and bacteria than to bad blood. Every puff of wind carries thousands of these germs to your face, where they lodge in the invisible skin pores. Here they produce their evil effects by making the complexion coarse and colorless. Your protection lies in using Savon Cadum, the great French Complexion soap, which cleanses the skin cells and pores so thoroughly that the bacteria are completely eliminated. Sold by the leading dept. and drug stores, 50c. a cake.

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear

(Notes of Today)

A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Later in the day another crowd assembled at the Zoological Gardens in front of the cage of the chimpanzees, Missy, which the morning papers had announced would perform the tango publicly for the first time.

Heard on the Sands

Father, mother, three children and a baby were at the seaside. It was a fine morning and father was paddling. Mother, as usual, had the children to look after.

They sprawled about her on the sands in a bored sort of way, until an organ-grinder came along, and on the organ was a monkey. The children cheered up.

When the grinder had ground out his stock of tunes he left his instrument and came around with the monkey for pennies. The kids immediately began to show signs of a longing to make friends with the little animal. But mother didn't approve.

"No, don't touch it, my darlings. Go and play with daddy instead."

Ralph Has an Interview With Edith's Father and Takes His Fiancee to the Theatre

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XXV.

WHEN Ralph Morton entered the Hale library at five o'clock he found Edith's father alone there and noted his face with a throb of relief. For hours he had feared that Tom Morton might also be present at the interview. Since it was only Mr. Hale with whom he had to deal, he could speak with less constraint. Suddenly he felt very confident of the outcome of the conversation, and smilingly held out his hand as his host rose to greet him.

"Good afternoon, Ralph," said the older man, not unkindly. "Sit down. I am glad you came so promptly, for I want to have a talk with you."

"I am glad that you do, sir," Ralph replied. "For I also want to talk with you. I have felt all day that I must see you."

Already he had assumed the part which he had determined to play. His real self seemed for the moment to be wholly detached from him—a prompter who, from somewhere in the wings of his consciousness, directed him in his role. Apart from a certain excitement, he felt more at his ease than he had done since Mr. Hale's telephone message to him.

"I imagine that we want to confer about the same thing," Edith's father began, tugging reflectively at his gray mustache. "I am going to be very frank in my questions to you, and I want you to be as straightforward in replying to them.

"This is no time for reserves or mistaken loyalty. The responsibility which you took upon yourself last night in asking my daughter to marry you should be considered before the possible claims of friendship."

"I fully appreciate that, sir," Ralph returned with a quiet dignity. "What do you wish to ask me?"

"Do you know of any reason," demanded Mr. Hale, "why Tom Morton, your cousin and friend, should not marry my daughter?"

"One very excellent reason is that she is engaged to me—and not to him," Ralph replied lightly.

A frown crossed the father's fine face at the flippant speech. "You are evading my question, Ralph," he accused. "Why did Tom Morton go to Baltimore?"

"He went on business, I believe," the other answered slowly.

"Do you know what the nature of the business was?"

MET EYES SQUARELY

The younger man hesitated for a moment, but his eyes met squarely the grave, estimating gaze of his questioner. It is a mistake to suppose that only the sincere person looks one directly in the eyes. When Ralph spoke there was a regretful note in his voice.

"I do not, sir," he said. "He protested, 'why I should be put on the witness stand, but he held accountable for Tom's comings and goings.

"As far as I can see, my only offense has been that of loving your daughter. That certainly is no cause for cross-examination concerning the doings of a man who is quite capable of speaking for himself. I would rest, sir, willingly with Tom for an account of his stay in Baltimore. I do not know that while there he paid at my request, a debt of mine. Further than that I cannot and will not say."

A sudden flash of understanding lighted John Hale's face. This, then, had been the money which the sender of the mysterious telegram to Ralph had mentioned. He had learned today that the message as repeated to Edith by Ralph's mother had been correct. Now he understood what it meant—at least to a certain extent.

But way had the sender cautioned Ralph to be careful, unless to warn him that Tom was not dealing honestly with him? Tom, whom he, John Hale, had always trusted and liked. He could not believe Tom to be untrustworthy.

The whole affair puzzled him and made him uneasy. Yet there had been a suggestion of reluctance to violate a confidence in the tone with which Ralph had delivered himself of his last words and this was not lost upon Mr. Hale.

"I can hardly demand an explanation from Tom," the father said somberly. "No one—not even Edith—has brought any fixed charge against him. The only count on which I can prove that he is guilty is that of losing his train, and I am too old a commuter to hold that against him for long." He tried to laugh, but failed. "From what you and Edith have told me, it appears that my daughter has been over-suspicious of the lad, and that he and she have lost their keen interest in each other. I cannot go to him and confront him with such an indictment—especially when the child herself has become engaged to another man.

"I suppose it is our breathless modern life that is responsible for this kind of thing," he added with a half smile. "We were slower in suspicions and in changing ideals when I was young."

"I do not want you to think, sir," Ralph interposed deprecatingly, "that I became engaged to Edith from any motive on her part except self-protection. I wish I could declare that she loves me—but she doesn't. I love her dearly. I have loved her ever since I was a little chap. I hope she may learn to love me—all unworthy as I know myself to be. I cannot even flatter myself into fancying that she cares for me very deeply yet—but I pray that she may in time.

GOOD LUCK HOLDS.

"Our engagement so far is one of form. She thought people had linked her name with Tom's and was distressed at the idea. I offered myself as a bulwark to shield her from gossip. I count myself honored that she accepted me. I hope you understand that."

"I do understand it, Ralph," said his companion with more cordiality than he had shown before. "I understand and appreciate it more than I can express. This sudden turn of affairs has been a shock to my wife and me—but we feel kindly toward you, Ralph."

Thus the interview ended, and Ralph felt that his good luck certainly had not forsaken him. A thrill of exultation ran through his being.

It stayed with him all the evening as he and Edith sat in the theatre, and he appeared at his best, bright, pleasant, polished in manner. The pair were seated after the performance in the fashionable Broadway restaurant where Ralph and Isabel had gone to dine, and on their way home, when Edith's smiling face grew suddenly grave.

"Let us go home, Ralph," she said, breathlessly. "It's very late."

The man's eyes followed the direction that her frightened gaze had taken. Two men were seated at a table not far from them. One of them Ralph did not recognize. The other was Tom Morton. As they looked, Tom turned and saw them both.

The Girl Who Spoons

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"IS it true that unless you allow the boys certain liberties, they will lose all interest in you?" writes Violet. "Now one of my girl friends tells me that she allows her beau to kiss her good-night and lets him call her pet names although they are not engaged. I don't allow such things, and of late the boy who used to be my best friend avoids me and is seen with girls who have far different standards than mine. I want to be told I am loved some day—but I want that to mean something, and I think a girl cheapens herself by allowing liberties. But I want friends and popularity. What shall I do? Am I the only girl who is—or is there another way?"

My dear Violet—the road to lasting popularity is not via cheap and easy "spooning."

The girl who allows a boy to kiss her must always seem to him to be a girl who will permit other boys the same liberties she accords him. Gradually he thinks lightly of her as a girl who does not hold herself at high valuation. Finally he comes to class her on the side of the women whose favors are not favors at all since they can be had for the mere asking.

The unattainable has a wonderful charm. The fine, the rare, the unusual appeal strongly to all humanity. The girl whose love is a fine, rare thing to be won by deserving and striving is the girl who has it in her power to grant a boon when she gives her heart and her kisses.

Of course, there are men in the world who "want what they want when they want it." Such men and boys want to take light kisses wherever they choose. But the love they would give is not real love for lasting feeling. It is the "lure of the moment—a passing fancy that needs a new face to stimulate it and seeks stimulation all the time. You are lucky to escape a fancy by refusing to gratify it.

Save your kisses, your love and your self-respect for a man who will properly value them. Don't buy the cheapest and most fleeting popularity at the high price of your own youthful freshness.

A peach with the bloom rubbed off, a flower with its petals faded from too bright sunlight are no more pathetic than a young girl whose first sweet modesty is soiled by the pressure of lips that kiss—and then carelessly tell of it.

If animation and amiability and friendly interest won't hold a boy's friendship, then he was not big enough character must be the tie between boy and girl friends. Kisses and caresses belong to true love, which makes them sacred. But as a price a girl pays to hold a boy's interest they are debased from gold to copper coinage.

When you cheapen your kisses, you cheapen yourself and love. And both are worth holding high and dear for the lover who will come some day.

New Way to Treat the Hair

The air is full of floating dust, dirt and disease germs, which settle upon the hair.

There is a natural oil on the head that holds the dust fast, and in a short time you have dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

The pores in the scalp are stopped up, the hair roots get no nourishment, and then the hair begins to fall out. Cleanliness is the one thing needed, and Birt's Head Wash is the ideal shampoo to bring it about. Its use will put the hair and scalp in a healthy, natural condition, so that faded, lifeless hair may resume its natural color and vigor.

Birt's Head Wash is made of Refined Creamy Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. There are no better things than these known for cleansing the hair and scalp, and doctors will tell you so if you ask them.

JAPAN TO SHOW WAY TO A WORLD'S PEACE, SAYS AGED PREMIER

In view of the growing interest as to the position that Japan will take in the world war now threatening, and the statement credited to Count Okumo, Premier of Japan, that America has made no demand on Japan and remains Japan's great, great friend," a hitherto unpublished interview on a world war by Count Okuma is of timely interest.

The interview was obtained by Horace E. Coleman, honorary secretary for the Japan Sunday School Association on May 2, at the Premier's home, and the translation was approved by Ryutaro Nasai, professor of languages at Waseda University. It was given out for publication by the Rev. Takeshi Uzaki, executive committee member of the World's Sunday School Association, director of the National Sunday School Association of Japan, who is making a tour of this country.

The interview follows:

TWO GREAT CLASSES.

"The nations of the earth may be divided into two classes, the strong and the weak. Which is responsible for bringing the peace generally? Usually it is the stronger nations because they can insist on their own interests, and it is the weaker nations that stand for justice, for they have no other arms than this appeal.

"Japan is a little stronger than the weak and a little weaker than the strong, so she is in good position to be a good mediator. In my opinion it is a mistaken conception of the strong to think that the strong has the right to rule the world. All nations should co-operate with each other and none should try to conquer the others. At the same time Japan wishes to teach that the weak that the weak are not at all unreasonable for breaking the peace.

CIVILIZATION LIKE WATER.

"Civilization is something like water, in that it runs from the higher to the lower. In this way the highly civilized countries are obliged to help the financially and commercially, so when the weak try to resist the spreading of civilization there naturally comes some sort of oppression by the strong. Sometimes, when several strong nations together, there comes a coalition of these just like we see in the Balkan States.

"Indeed, if the strong would be merciful enough to lead the weak as an older brother, and if the weak tried to walk arm in arm with the strong, there would be no such thing as war or war talk. In history we see some conflict between the white and colored races, between the Christians and the heathens, between Asiatics and Europeans, but these are matters which have not concerned Japan. The Japanese are quite different from other Asiatics, not only in blood, but also in spirit. We have today about as much western civilization as we do of the eastern, and Japan belongs to the east and the west. We stand to introduce the west to the east and the east to the west, but Japan has no ambition to land the east against the west.

HOW PEACE IS SUSTAINED.

"The peace of Europe is sustained by the balance of six powers—England, Germany, Russia, France, Italy and Austria. Of these six, Austria and Italy have no influence in the Far East. The peace of the Far East is sustained by six powers—Germany, Great Britain, Russia, France, the United States and Japan.

"Italy and Austria have no concern with this sphere of influence. America has kept herself for years past, under the Monroe Doctrine, from touching the other continents, but today the economic conditions of that country have developed so much that she must dispose of her products and capital outside of the country, and at last the Spanish-American war has conferred upon her the Philippines, which are so near China. This political condition has compelled the United States to come out from under the yoke of the Monroe Doctrine, as she must guard her interests in the East.

"Now these six countries standing around China are in unanimous agreement to keep the status of China, so certainly the day will come when the world will see the dawn of peace in the Far East, and Japan will do her best and bravest to perform her peaceful mission with these other countries following the same purpose.

OPEN DOOR POLICY.

"I believe there is not one of these countries that has territorial ambitions toward China. Under Hartison, during his term of office, sent out a circular advocating the open-door policy toward China among all the Powers, when from other quarters there was much dangerous talk about the partition of China, and that open-door policy has been accepted by all these powers, and equality of opportunity for all countries is kept in China.

"Actually, then, the international economic interests have become so mixed together that the world peace has brought these countries into closer and more intimate relations. In this way we find that interests are so mixed together the nations come to know that the other nations are not foes but friends, and naturally such a ally thing as racial or religious prejudice will pass away in this development of the co-operative work of the nations in China.

"Japan has no other ambition than to work as interpreter of the Eastern mind in the west and intermediator between the west and the east."

HOLD WOMAN AS SLAYER OF MAN IN HENNIKER

HENNIKER, N. H., Aug. 13.—Following her confession that she killed Charles Manley on March 8, the authorities today made plans to arraign Mrs. Jennie Mills on the charge of murder, at Bradford, tomorrow. Mrs. Mills, when confronted by an official made by her eleven-year-old daughter, broke down and said she was the one with whom the had been living as housekeeper. Manley reserved to die and it was only a question of whether he died then or whether I died, for I was not going to let my little girl's mother be hanged for me," declared Mrs. Mills in her cell at the Concord jail today. Friends of Mrs. Mills today insist that she acted only in self-defense. They expected that Mills will be her plea when she is arraigned tomorrow.

The young daughter of Mrs. Mills told in a minute of the State Industrial school, in her affidavit made to Detective Hillreth, declares that her mother committed the crime. This affidavit the authorities secured after questioning the girl many times during the past four months.

"There was nothing else for me to do," says Mrs. Mills. "I could have left Manley, of course, they will say but I knew well I have state."

"There were some times when he came home and ill-treated me that I felt I could stand it no longer. I didn't know what to do. I even felt at times that in my blind anger I would do some thing to get even with him—but I never really meant it.

"On that night when it happened—well, I don't quite exactly know what I did do. I know I was blind with pain, and with anger, and the[n] some-how the shotgun in my hand—and it was all over.

'HUNGER MADE ME BRIDE,' SAYS MRS. GLOVER

"My husband has money and I was half starved," today declared Mrs. Fernand A. Delmarre, who up to June 30 this year was Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, widow of Clarence P. Glover, the murdered Waltham laundryman, in admitting her secret marriage. The couple are living at the old Glover home.

"I have known Mr. Delmarre twenty-six years. He is an old family friend. One of his previous wives was my cousin. This is his fifth marriage. Three of his wives died and from the other he obtained a divorce. He has seven children, from ten to twenty-two years old.

"I may as well have my hands full taking care of children as taking care of courts.

"We are going to his farm in Norwood and there raise chickens and the children. My husband says he is seventy-five years old, though he is but sixty-five."

Mrs. Glover-Delmarre may take the stand today in the Municipal Court at her hearing on charges of forgery and uttering, perjury and conspiracy to steal brought against her by Samuel D. Elmore, administrator of the Glover will.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. Agnes V. Swetland, of Omaha, Nebr., says: "Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Pearman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, and I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive tract."

Motor Notes.

By J. C. KERRISON.

Henry T. Myers, manager of the Studebaker wholesale branch in this city, will tomorrow entertain fifty or sixty dealers from out of town, they coming here to secure deliveries of the new four and six-cylinder Studebaker. A shipment was recently received by Mr. Myers and he felt that the distribution of the same to his dealers would give him an admirable opportunity of getting in touch with them individually—hence the meeting.

They anticipate being exceedingly busy at the Studebaker wholesale branch receiving and entertaining the visitors. By Saturday morning the dealers throughout New England will have on hand their new models and anticipate inaugurating the 1915 season in a most wholesome and effective manner.

* * *

Hugh Chalmers, head of the motor manufacturing concern bearing his name, together with General Sales-manager Percy Owen, are spending a few days in this city. They inspected the Commonwealth avenue branch recently taken over by the Detroit office and congratulated Manager Harry N. Pyke upon its general business-like appearance. Neither Mr. Chalmers or Mr. Owen seem to consider that there will be any ill effect, locally at least, as the result of the European conflict.

* * *

Webb Jay, once one of the most noted of dare-devil race drivers and a man who in years gone by was credited with honorable success in most of the Glidden tours and other endurance contests, is spending a few days in this city as the guest of his old friend, Watson Coleman. Webb Jay and Watson Coleman were teammates even before the automobile was known, they having participated in the successful transcontinental bicycle racing career and later enjoyed together the victories of the White cars in the tours of years ago.

Webb Jay is today looking healthier and stronger than ever. He is identified with the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Company, controlling an important patent used by that concern.

The rush for agencies for the Dodge Brothers' product has been one of the remarkable features of the motoring industry in Detroit and has aroused considerable interest. Sales-manager Arthur J. Philp recently compiled some statistics which are interesting. These data show that the company has received 5,186 agency applications, and that no less than thirty-one applications have been received from one city.

The Germans' Naval Use of Their Kiel Canal Is a Lesson for Americans

We wonder whether the events of the great struggle in Europe have shocked the conscience of those Democratic Congressmen who, in violation of their party pledges, voted to surrender to foreign powers our most vital rights in the great Panama Canal.

If recent events in Europe have not made them bleed in their conscience it is because they have no patriotism or not enough intelligence to observe the significance of things. The military experts the world over tell us, what we know ourselves, that Germany's chief reliance today is the Kiel Canal. This goes through the peninsula extending out in the Baltic and North Seas, in which Denmark is located. It enables the German fleet to pass from one section of the German coast to the other in a straight line. It will compel the hostile fleets, seeking to destroy the German navy quickly, to divide, a most dangerous course in warfare.

A United States Army officer declares this morning that the Kiel Canal is far more important to the Germans than all her cities, and that the French will try harder to take the Kiel Canal than they will try to capture Berlin. With the Germans controlling the Kiel Canal, Russia, England and France cannot safely land their armies on the German shores, if the allies have not yet ventured to divide their fleets in an attempt to block both ends of this canal.

We built the Panama Canal principally for its great strategic advantage in time of war, because it would thus give us almost a straight line between our coasts. The disadvantage which Germany would have suffered without that canal by being obliged to pass around the Danish peninsula to reach from one part of its coast line to the other, is a difficulty one hundred times multiplied in our case by our necessity, without the Panama Canal OR WITHOUT THE ABSOLUTE CONTROL of the canal, to pass around the South American continent.

Those Congressmen, particularly those in the House of Representatives who voted for the bill as originally drafted repealing the free tolls, voted for it upon the monstrous principle that we had no right to levy a tax on foreign ships passing through this canal that we did not levy upon our own ships, and THIS PRINCIPLE APPLIES TO OUR WARSHIPS. If we admit the principle upon which the free tolls bill was repealed, we cannot give our own warships any advantage which we do not give to any foreign warships.

Think of the patriotism and the intelligence of American Congressmen who voted to abolish free tolls for American ships on the ground that we could not treat American ships differently from our treatment of foreign ships in this canal—a canal that we built and fortified at a tremendous expense, on land that we had purchased for the very purpose of giving us the military advantage of an exclusive and shorter water connection between our Eastern and Western coasts.

We can realize by the fearful things now transpiring in Europe how illusory is the reliance upon the prospect of the world's peace. Intelligent men must now realize the wisdom of harking back to the advice which Washington gave us in his farewell address, that in time of peace we must prepare for war and that the best guarantee of peace is preparation for war.

The issues of this conflict in Europe will produce conditions which no man can foretell. They may culminate in a few days or in six months. In any event, we need patriotic and intelligent men in our legislative bodies. We need to undo the wrong which has been done to America through the miserable betrayal of party and country by those Democratic Congressmen who voted to repeal the free tolls bill upon the ground that we HAD NO SUCH CONTROL of the Panama Canal as would PERMIT US TO DISCRIMINATE BETWEEN OUR OWN SHIPS AND THE SHIPS OF A FOREIGN COUNTRY. We should rid ourselves of these men, for they cannot be trusted to preserve their country's rights and interests at the sacrifice of a few petty political jobs.

The men whom the people of their districts ought to retire from public life are Congressman Thomas C. Thacher of the Cape Cod district of Massachusetts, Congressman Daniel J. McGillicuddy of Maine and Congressmen E. E. Reed and R. E. Stevens of New Hampshire. Do not forget them, either at the primaries or at the polls.

The Governor Appoints the Port Board, Advises It and Is Going to Watch It

Governor Walsh read a lecture to the newly appointed members of the Board of Port Directors immediately after their confirmation which they ought to take as the charter of their policy.

They are entrusted with one of the most important duties devolving upon public servants in this Commonwealth. They are charged with the duty of developing the Port of Boston and have been given a large appropriation of the public moneys with which to do their work.

The Governor told them that they had no connections or interest except the GENERAL public interest; that they had no friends to reward and no enemies to punish in the course of their duties; that they must hew to the line, letting the chips fall where they may; that no one of them had received his appointment by virtue of the friendship or favor of any other man; that they were under obligation to no one but the Commonwealth for their positions and that he would scrutinize their acts most carefully to see whether in the course of their service they were using their public authority and the public funds for the special benefit of any person or special interest in the community.

The Governor declared to them that if he discovered the slightest deviation from the course which he laid down, he would remove them. Thus he has done all that words can do to insure an impartial and public character of work on this important board.

The Real Battlefield

Here the battle of life and death is fought to its bitter end.

This is the battle without hope.

No drums beating, trumpets sounding on this battlefield.

The man is away—sent, he knows not why, to be murdered.

The Light That Flickered

By Rev. C. F. Aked, D. D., LL. D.

FIFTY years ago Meredith Townsend occupied a very large place in the world of journalism. His essays in the London Spectator were read on both sides of the Atlantic. An article of his written in 1863 has recently been unearthed. It is entitled, "Fifty Years Hence."

Townsend sought to cast the light of prophecy into what was then the future and is now the present time. Looking back over nearly half a century, we can hardly call it the light that failed; let us say the light that flickered.

The essayist anticipated a period of extraordinarily increased healthiness. He quoted an address by one of the great physicians of his day, and he contemplated the disappearance of typhus, cholera and of scrofula, a disappearance as complete and final as leprosy or the black death. He foresaw an end of that terribly high rate of infant mortality which has disgraced our civilization.

Everything moves in the direction indicated by the prediction. We are winning in the fight against disease. The cities grow healthier. The span of human life is lengthened. In this the light did not flicker.

• • •

It is curious today to read Townsend's forecast concerning immigration. He saw in the exodus from European countries to the American continent nothing less than the most formidable danger to which Europe and European society were exposed. He saw the population of England (the British Isles) reduced to ten millions.

He thought that the masses of the people who would then be in supreme power might use the fleet for the purpose of transporting the millions from the old world to the new. The population of Great Britain, according to the last census, is forty-one millions.

His outlook upon the problematic conquest of the air is very singular. He thought he saw what tremendous results would follow from such a conquest; but he saw no likelihood that the conquest would be achieved. This is his outlook:

"We say nothing of a discovery which, if it is ever made, will remould all human society, slowly pulverise all differences among nations, fusing the world into one people and immediately destroy all existing political arrangements; the discovery of a means of maintaining and guiding a raft of ten feet or so in the air—for we cannot resist the totally unreasonable impression that the discovery will not be made, that progress will not in our time make that astounding leap."

• • •

This glance across half a century at the flickering light of prophecy held aloft by thoughtful souls recalls some of the astounding failures of great men to unfurl the future before our eyes. Predictions with regard to the future of our own country, made in all sober seriousness, look very funny today.

Charles Dickens wrote to Forster from Philadelphia in 1868. He said of the colored people of the United States:

"I strongly believe that they will die out of this country fast. It seems, looking at them, so manifestly absurd to suppose it possible that they can ever hold their own against a restless, shifty, striving, stronger race."

Harriet Martineau was confident that labor and capital must in the nature of things meet and kiss each other and live happily ever afterward under American institutions.

De Tocqueville's mistaken predictions are not less interesting. He launched out upon what he called the "unquestionable statement" that if any portion of the American Union seriously desired to separate itself from the other States, these would not be able, nor, indeed, would they attempt to prevent it.

He did not believe that the Union would hold together, and he said: "If the sovereignty of the Union were to engage in a struggle with that of the States, at the present day, its defeat may be confidently predicted."

• • •

The moral of all this is not the one favored by the humorists: "You shouldn't never prophesy till you know." The moral is that life is so played upon by currents and cross-currents whose direction and force we cannot perceive, that policy never yet was the guide of men or nations.

Men Who Made America

Nathaniel Bacon—Without Rebellion Progressive Civilization Would Be Impossible, and This Man Was Our First Rebel

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

ALL that there is in the world today that is great and good was given to us by rebels.

Rebellion is the first principle of progress, and without it progressive civilization would be impossible.

Your rebel rises up against the existing order, curses its abuses, proclaims the dream of better things, is hanged for his audacity, and, by all save the few, is clean forgotten; but the dream lives on, becoming stronger and stronger, wins a larger and still larger number of friends, and by and by receives its splendid vindication.

The rebel who was hanged has monuments erected to his memory, and the political, religious or economic heresy for the preaching of which he was executed like a felon becomes the revered gospel of mankind.

One of such rebels was Nathaniel Bacon, the young Virginian who, for the first time on American soil, threw down the gauntlet to organized tyranny and drew the sword in defence of the popular rights.

Bacon had good blood in his veins. His father, Thomas Bacon, of Friston Hall, Suffolk, was a kinsman of the great Lord Bacon. His mother was the daughter of a Suffolk knight, Sir Robert Brooke. The character and abilities of the young man were so high that almost immediately after his arrival in America he was given a seat in the Council and looked up to as one who might safely be entrusted with the largest responsibilities.

The sequel proved that the popular confidence was not misplaced.

In the Spring of the year 1676 a band of Indians pounced down upon the Virginian planters, and out of the depredations of the redskins grew "Bacon's Rebellion," the first armed opposition to royal authority and militrule on the North American Continent.

Young Bacon, at the head of the mounted farmers of the section, set out after the savages, but was ordered to disperse by Governor Berkeley, the man whom King Charles himself called an "old fool."

Bacon "dispersed"—but not until he had given the redskins a terrible thrashing.

Later on Bacon was arrested, on the ground that he had had "no commission" while dealing with the Indians. Berkeley was willing to have the settlers murdered rather than have them saved by a man "without a commission"—that is to say, without a commission signed by himself.

In the meantime the Indians, paying no attention to the quibblings of the Governor, began to renew their depredations. With the ferocity that was troubled by no nice distinctions about mercy or justice, they played havoc with the lives and property of the whites, and it began to look as if the day of doom was close at hand.

Something had to be done, and Bacon made up his mind to act—commission or no commission.

Effecting his escape from the detention to which he had been subjected by the stupid Governor, Bacon hastily raised a body of men, six hundred strong, marched straight on Jamestown, threw his defiance in the face of the Governor, and turning his attention to the savages dealt them the blows that sent them reeling from the scenes of their devastations and cruelties.

Of course, Berkeley was greatly shocked at Bacon's action. Mad as a March hare, the irate old Governor proclaimed Bacon a "rebel" and launched against him all the thunders of the royal arsenal. Bacon had saved the people, but he had dared to do this without the sanction and assistance of the King's representative, and for that crime he was outlawed.

"I am in over my shoes," exclaimed Bacon upon hearing of the Governor's proclamation, "and I will soon be in over my long boots." His beautiful young wife was as resolute as himself, and kissing her husband she said to him: "Stand firm for the right. As for myself, I care no more for the royalty of England than I do for a broken straw."

Inspired by his wife's kiss and the consciousness of the complete justice of his cause, Bacon made his second march on Jamestown, defeated Governor Berkeley's forces, and laid the town in ashes.

To be perfect is a privilege that nature grants to no man, and Bacon was not perfect. It is a pity that in destroying the old town his rashness got the better of his judgment; but every whole man realises how hard it is at times to keep a noble enthusiasm within the bounds of decorum.

With the destruction of Jamestown and his forces wiped out, with the spirit of revolt everywhere and the very foundations of the royal authority shaken up as by an earthquake, the Governor was fairly at his wit's end.

But Bacon's work was rapidly nearing its close. The poisonous malaria germs of the low, flat region were at work in the powerful frame of the daring young rebel, and on the first day of October, 1676, Nathaniel Bacon was dead. There was no one in the Old Dominion big enough and brave enough to take the dead man's place, and the rebellion was over.

With the master-spirit of the revolt laid low in death, Berkeley suddenly became very bold, and returning from the royal vessel to which Bacon had driven him, he began the work of "getting even" with the men who had dared to aid in the overthrow of his oligarchical rule.

But Bacon's spirit lived on—Berkeley could not kill that—and one hundred years later it animated the clarion tones of Patrick Henry and Sam Adams as they called their countrymen to the big revolt against King George.

Hospitality in Summer

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

ONE of the most charming forms of hospitality is in inviting friends to spend a few days or weeks in a country house. The best sort of hospitality is in entertaining guests with heartfelt kindness, not with the expectation of reward, but with the sincere intention of giving pleasure.

Obviously the first rule of hospitality is to make one's friends happy, comfortable and at ease, to receive and welcome them with cordiality and graciousness, and to show that their coming adds to the happiness of host and hostess.

A good hostess is careful to provide her best, although her best may be very simple. She does not fear to bid friends to her house although her household is arranged on moderate lines, nor does she strive to be lavish or to plan entertainments in imitation of elaborate households. Informal amusements are always enjoyable. Country diversions offer a great boon to those who are weary of the artificial life of town.

Invitations are always informal notes written by the hostess. The custom is to name a definite period for the visit, stating dates and mentioning the train or boat that will be convenient for arriving. If other guests are expected the fact may be mentioned.

A suggestion may be included as to plans for certain amusements or whether it is to be spent very quietly. This helps to inform a friend what clothes may be required for the visit.

A hostess should inspect a guest's room in advance of the arrival and see that nothing is lacking by way of comfort or convenience. A clock, some new books, a desk with writing material, a lounge where one may rest, a light coverlet to use when taking a nap—these are a few of the things needed.

Plenty of towels, fresh water and new soap should be provided. A candlestick and matches are a convenience. Fresh flowers in a vase offer an agreeable welcome.

Visitors should be met on the arrival of train or boat, and all arrangements made for the conveyance of guests and luggage to the house.

A tactful hostess remembers the tastes and habits of her guests. She understands that she has two very important duties to perform—not to neglect her guests and not to weary them by too much attention. The impression should never be given that a visitor is being entertained or is on the mind of a hostess. A sensible hostess knows that a guest will be grateful if allowed to have some time in the day to be alone, to rest, write letters or to read. An interval of this sort gives more pleasure in the renewed intercourse during a visit.

The daily life and daily duties of the household should go on regularly. The rhythm of a country house usually is that it is a home, where home duties are not neglected.

Golf, tennis, motoring, boating, bathing or mountain climbing may be among the daily amusements. An impromptu picnic or a luncheon at first in the woods may be made a pleasant surprise. Games, music, cards or conversation may fill the evenings.

A hostess mentions to friends in the neighborhood that she expects guests. They may call if they please. Often there is an interchange of pleasant hospitality.

There is no lack of cordiality in refraining from urging friends to lengthen their visit. It is sufficient to express regret that the time for parting has come.
